TELEGRAMS.

The Peace Conference to Commence its Sessions To-day.

Probability of the Withdrawal of the Turkish Representative.

Proclamation of Amnesty by the Captain-General of Cuba.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

The Peace Conference not Postponed—The Sultan's Instructions to the Turkish Ambassador.

LONDON, Friday, Jan. 8.

The request of the Sublime Porte for a postponement of the Conference on the Eastern Question for a few days, in order that time might be gained for instructing the Turkish representatives, has not been acceded to. The sessions of the Conference will certainly open in Paris to-morrow. The Sultan, consequently, has been compelled to telegraph at length from Constantinople his instructions to DERIEL MEHMED PACHA, the Turkish Ambassador, at Paris. There is no question that part of these instructions are, that if the discussions in the Conference extend beyond the Sublime Porte's ultimatum to the Grecian Government, that the Turkish representative shall immediately withdraw.

The Turquie, the official newspaper at Constantinople, in its issue of yesterday, said that if the Turkish representative withdraws from the Conference, war with Greece is inevitable.

LONDON, Friday, Jan. 8—Evening.

The firm attitude of Turkey on the Eastern Question excites much alarm.

VIENNA, Friday, Jan. 8.

The Presse of this city asserts that the representatives of the Greek Government at the Paris Conference will not be permitted to offer any proposition, but will attend only for the purpose of giving information in regard to the subjects under discussion. The Conference will frame a project of settlement which it will be the duty of Greece to adopt after its acceptance by the Sublime Porte, and the withdrawal of the Turkish ultimatum.

FRANCE.

Outflow of Bullion from the Bank of France.

PARIS, Friday, Jan. 8.

The outflow of specie from the Bank of France still continues. The regular weekly statement is made public to-day, whereby it is shown the amount of bullion in vault is twenty-seven and a half millions of francs less than at the corresponding period last week.

SPAIN.

Prevalence of Political Excitement.

PARIS, Friday, Jan. 8.

Dispatches from Madrid report that much agitation prevails in all parts of Spain.

ITALY.

Reported Insurrection in Milan.

PARIS, Friday, Jan. 8.

A rumor is current here that an insurrection has broken out in Milan.

CUBA.

Captain-General Dulce and the Insurgents—A Proclamation of Amnesty.

HAVANA, Friday, Jan. 8.

The proclamation of Captain-General DULCE is favorably received by the majority of the people, but is criticised by the extremists of both Spanish and Cuban parties. It is rumored that an interview will take place between Gen. DULCE and prominent revolutionists in Havana. Should the meeting be successful, it would tend materially to the restoration of peace on the island. News has been received here from Nassau that a schooner recently arrived there from Cuba, after successfully landing fifty recruits and 2,000 muskets for the insurgents. Many reports of engagements between the troops and the rebels in the interior are circulating here, but none of them have yet received confirmation.

The correspondent of the NEW-YORK TIMES at Bayamo says the revolutionary chiefs have concluded to issue a proclamation making all slaves free, and fixing a day after which they shall receive pay for their labor, and they propose to carry this resolution into immediate effect.

HAVANA, Friday, Jan. 8—Evening.

The Gaceta will publish to-morrow a proclamation by the Captain-General, granting a general and absolute amnesty of all political offenses, pardoning all persons, whether now confined in prison, or in hiding, or absent from the country.

Gen. DULCE will issue another proclamation to-morrow, dissolving the military commissions, and restoring full jurisdiction to the civil courts. In a few days Gen. DULCE will promulgate the law establishing the liberty of the Press. The public prints will be permitted to discuss, without the intervention of the censorship, all questions except those relating to slavery and the dogmas of the Catholic religion.

HAYTI.

A British Steamer Seized by Salnave—Outrages by the Insurgents.

HAVANA, Friday, Jan. 8.

The British war steamer Eclipse has arrived here with later and important news from Port-au-Prince.

The Haytien steamer Salnave seized the British schooner Cosch, Capt. PEARL, from Saint Marc, with a cargo of coffee and cotton, and carried her into Port-au-Prince as a prize.

It was reported that the United States Consul at Aux Cayes had been roughly handled by the revolutionists, but the story is not credited.

An attack was about to be made on the port of Aquin, President SALNAVE has ordered his steamer to attack the port in Jonak while he will personally superintend the landing of forces in the rear of the place. The women and children have all left the town and taken refuge in the ships in the harbor.

There was a fight at Aux Cayes on Christmas, in which the citizens and troops defeated the Piquets.

The Accident at Rochester—Eight Deaths Reported.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Friday, Jan. 8.

Thus far but eight persons have died in consequence of the falling of the school-house floor on Wednesday night. There are nearly fifty of the wounded, but most of them are out of danger. Six of the killed were buried this morning. One funeral was held for all at the St. Peter's and St. Paul's Catholic Church. The Coroner's investigation shows that the cause of the accident was neglect to put a stone cap of full size upon a brick pier in the cellar.

The New-Hampshire Veterans' Union.

CONCORD, N. H., Friday, Jan. 8.

The fourth annual meeting of the New-Hampshire Veterans' Union was held to-day at Union Hall. There was a large attendance of officers of the veteran regiments of the State. The following officers were elected: Major-Gen. S. G. GRIFFIN, President; Brig-Gen. JOHN BURNS, Vice-President; Lieut.-Col. JOSIAH STEVENS, Jr., Secretary; Major HENRY MCFARLAND, Treasurer. A resolution was passed that all arrangements as to the time and place of the next reunion, and the nature of the entertainment provided on the occasion, be left to the Executive Committee. The orator, Major-Gen. KILPATRICK, was received with cheers, and he spoke for nearly an hour in an eloquent and impassioned manner, which no mere abstract of his oration could do justice to. The ball this evening is a brilliant affair.

MAINE.

Inauguration of Gov. Chamberlain—His Address to the Legislature.

AUGUSTA, Me., Friday, Jan. 8.

Gov. CHAMBERLAIN was inaugurated to-day, in the presence of both branches of the Legislature and a large concourse of people. He has been in feeble health for several days, and had some difficulty in delivering his address, which was unusually short. On national matters the Governor spoke as follows:

"In the recent decision of the people, at the critical hour when the great issues which have distracted the country were to be finally determined, they have shown that they are not willing to give the Government over into the hands of our adversaries as a rebuke for our errors and weakness, and that neither the argument of violence nor of treachery shall cause them to lose sight of the high mission laid upon them for the enfranchisement of men. The firm hand raised up by Providence to quell the violence of the rebellion is chosen once more to guide in the victories of peace. The task is not in doubt. Light to restore financial confidence and industrial prosperity, but we may now pursue it under more favorable auspices. The different branches of the Government will no longer have occasion to bend their energies to battle each other. The States of the South will see that our quarrel is not with them but with the impalpable spirit of secession and rebellion, and it is to be hoped they will acquiesce in the manifest will of the people. Diversity of interest and multiplicity of plan will be harmonized to one great end. We shall have peace. Conciliation, magnanimity and fraternal regard may safely resume their benignant sway. Our State, which bore so heroic a part in the strife of arms, may congratulate herself on the important share she is to take in the greater and more difficult act of reconciliation."

The Governor shows a very good condition of our finances. Last year the receipts were $135,353,267; expenditures, $114,250,774. The public debt has been reduced $37,000. The whole debt now outstanding is $75,168,600, which falls due in 1871. To meet this we have the accumulating sinking fund, which, with the sum paid in on our claim against the General Government already amounts to $846,000. The Governor takes strong ground in favor of capital punishment, and intimates that unless the law is changed he shall feel it his duty to issue his warrant for the execution of every person convicted of murder. In the question of the constabulary act, he says it is repugnant to the deep-rooted notions of municipal rights. It was an independent and abnormal power in the civil system. He says there is available water-power in this State to the amount of upward of a million horse-power, a power equal to that of 15,000,000 men. No one can fail to see that the seat of manufactures of New-England is yet to be within the limits of this State. When we consider that in Massachusetts and Rhode Island water-power is worth from $150 to $400 per horse-power, and rents in some places $70 per year for each horse-power, we see how immediate and great a source of wealth lies in our natural resources. He recommends that the State loan its credit to the railroads, and favors the biennial election of State officers and sessions of the Legislature.

The Election of Mr. Hamlin as Senator from Maine Conceded.

AUGUSTA, Me., Friday, Jan. 8.

The great Senatorial contest is virtually settled. The excitement has now passed away, and it is now conceded that Mr. HAMLIN, who fairly won, will receive the unanimous support of his party at the election, which takes place one week from Tuesday next.

Murder by a Gambler in Memphis.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Friday, Jan. 8.

A shooting affray occurred in this city this morning, at 10 o'clock, at the corner of Second and Market streets, resulting in the death of EDWARD WHITEFIELD and the wounding of Mrs. MOORE and WHITEFIELD, cotton factors, by S. A. DORAN, a gambler. DORAN had rented a house from WHITEFIELD's father, and kept such disreputable company that an attempt was made in the courts to eject him. DORAN this morning published a card in the Avalanche denouncing both of the WHITEFIELD's as thieves, liars and pollroons.

EDWIN WHITEFIELD and Major MOORE went to his house for the purpose, it is supposed, of chastising DORAN. On knocking at the door it was opened and WHITEFIELD entered. The door was slammed in Mr. MOORE's face, and locked. The shooting commenced simultaneously with the locking of the door. When MOORE and a crowd, who were attracted by the firing, burst the door open, WHITEFIELD was found laying on the floor dying, and DORAN and two women standing in the centre of the room. DORAN cried out that he surrendered, and he and the women were taken to jail. WHITEFIELD's pistol was found on him never having been drawn. He was shot through the body five times and beaten over the head with a pistol. There is strong talk of lynching DORAN.

The Funeral of Gen. Rousseau—Gen. Buchanan Assumes Command.

NEW-ORLEANS, Friday, Jan. 8.

Gen. ROUSSEAU will be buried here to-morrow at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Gen. BUCHANAN assumes command to-day by virtue of seniority. His order assuming command simply announces that Gens. BABCOCK and POMEROY, of Gen. GRANT's staff, have returned from Texas. Sixty civilian agents and clerks of the Freedmen's Bureau of this State have been discharged, thus reducing the establishment to small proportions. An order was issued yesterday prohibiting further admissions in the Freedmen's Hospital of this City.

The Negro Difficulties in Virginia—The Death of Hon. John R. Botts.

NORFOLK, Va., Friday, Jan. 8.

Reliable information received here this evening from the scene of yesterday's affray, reports the negroes much excited, but no further acts of violence had been perpetrated. The military force sent to the assistance of the Sheriff has returned to this city, and no further disturbance is apprehended.

RICHMOND, Va., Friday, Jan. 8.

A company of infantry and a battery of the Fifth Artillery were sent to Norfolk by rail to-day.

A meeting of citizens is called for to-morrow to make preparations for the funeral of the late Hon. JNO. M. BOTTS. The bells here were tolled all day and the State House flag is at half mast.

Col. THOMAS N. BURWELL, Captain in the war of 1812, died to-day, aged 81 years.

Execution of a Murderer at Rome, N. Y.

UTICA, N. Y., Friday, Jan. 8.

WILLIAM HENRY CARSWELL, the murderer of the little girl ABBY SAUNDERS, near Camden, in April last, was hung at 12:40 o'clock to-day at Rome. The prisoner professed to have made his peace with God, and he was ready to die. On the scaffold he asked all to be warned by his fate. He stated that his sentence was just and that his crime demanded his death. Between 200 and 300 special deputies were in the jail yard. Thousands of persons were outside. Chloroform was administered to the prisoner just previous to the falling of the drop.

A Colored Man Convicted of Murder in Pennsylvania.

PITTSBURG, Friday, Jan. 8.

LOUIS LANE, colored, who has been on trial for poisoning his wife, was to-day convicted for murder in the first degree. This was the second trial.

Six frame buildings on Federal-street, in Allegheny City, were destroyed by fire this morning. They were occupied by MCKNIGHT & SMITH, grocers; insured for $7,500. CHARLES REINSMEYER, queensware; loss $6,000, insured. A. J. PENTCOST, hardware; loss $3,000, no insurance. J. & C. BROWN, shoes; loss $3,000, insured.

The Central Pacific Railroad—Trains Running to Nevada.

SAN FRANCISCO, Friday, Jan. 8.

Trains on the Central Pacific Railroad are running on schedule time to Carlin, in the northeast corner of Nevada, 500 miles distant. Track layers are at Humboldt Canyon, twenty-five miles further east. No interruption has occurred from snows so far, the twenty-two miles of snow-sheds at the summit of the Sierras working satisfactorily. The commercial business of the Central, for December, exceeded $940,000.

MISSOURI.

Legislative Caucus on the Question of the Senatorship—Speech by Gen. Carl Schurz.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Friday, Jan. 8.

A general caucus of the Missouri Legislature was held at Jefferson City last night, to hear Gens. SCHURZ and LOAN, candidates for the United States Senatorship, define their positions. The caucus turned out to be a mass meeting, and was largely attended by citizens generally as well as members of the Legislature. Gen. LOAN, being unwell, was not present. The discussion was intended mainly to give Gen. SCHURZ an opportunity to reply to the charge of his opponent, that he is in favor of immediately enfranchising rebels and turning the States over to the hands of the enemy. A special dispatch to the Anzeiger gives the following account of the proceedings at the meeting:

"Gen. SCHURZ distinctly denied the above charge, and stated that he was astonished at it, after so frequently and emphatically declaring his position on the question. He divided the question into two parts—Federal and State—and said in the United States Senate he would support the following amendments: First, general suffrage without distinction of color or previous condition, but recognizing the right of a State to disfranchise on account of African or rebellion. Second, an amendment to reduce every rebellious State to a territorial condition. So far as Missouri was concerned, negro suffrage was a justice done the negro, and rebel suffrage was a grace to be done to the disloyal. He was first for justice and second for grace. He was for repealing the Disfranchisement solemnly after negro suffrage was adopted. He ridiculed the constitutional performances of DRAKE & Co., and said had he been a member of the Convention he never would have consented to make enfranchisement easier than negro suffrage, as the Drake Constitution did. He severely criticised both DRAKE and BLAIR for their visit to Washington at so critical a moment, only for the purpose of defeating him. He stigmatized the charges made against him as willful lies. He declared that he had never belonged to any ring, and treated the subject of patronage as of no consequence to him. He concluded by observing that his position was known far and wide, and never had a Senatorial election commanded so much attention, both in America and Europe, as this one had. He believed that his election would greatly encourage emigration to this country and State.

Gen. LOAN not being present, Mr. DRAKE was invited to speak. He said he should not be expected to reply off-hand to a well-prepared speech assailing him so violently, but he offered to answer at some future time, whereupon the caucus invited him to name the day before sitting down. Mr. DRAKE made some very bitter remarks against Gen. SCHURZ, striking hard blows, and saying he should show in his response whose heart best answers to the pulsations the great Radical Party.

Mr. HENDERSON was then called upon and spoke. He ridiculed many of the remarks of Gen. SCHURZ, advocated his own reflection, and made a strong effort on behalf of the repeal of the Disfranchisement act."

DISASTER AT SEA.

Reported Loss of a Vessel on the Nova Scotia Coast with all on Board.

HALIFAX, N. S., Friday, Jan. 8.

A vessel, supposed to be the A. R. Dunlop, from Boston to Halifax, has been wrecked on the coast, and all hands lost.

The Seymour Express Robbery—The Chicago Board of Trade.

CHICAGO, Friday, Jan. 8.

ALLAN PINKERTON denies Detective FALKER's statement that RENO and ANDERSON were innocent of the express robbery at Seymour, and that FALKER knew and could have arrested the guilty parties. PINKERTON reiterates his statement that RENO and ANDERSON were the criminals. In the Superior Court to-day the Board of Trade of this City interposed their answer in the injunction suit to prevent their expelling MURRAY NELSON & Co. from the privileges of the Board. The directors deny that they were parties to the late corner on corn, and uphold the by-laws and regulations of the Board as legal, and assert that their action is based upon these by-laws. The case will come up for hearing to-morrow on the motion to dissolve the injunction.

Court of Appeals.

ALBANY, N. Y., Friday, Jan. 8.

The Court of Appeals day calendar for Saturday, Jan. 9, Nos. 26, 27, 28, 30, 31, 33, 34, 35, 36, 40½, 40¾, 43, 44, 45, 47.

WASHINGTON.

Interest in the Senatorial Contests—The Standard Weights and Measures—Louisiana Revenue Frauds—The Virginia Committee.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Jan. 8.

The various Senatorial contests continue to excite deep interest here. The greatest anxiety is for news from New-York. The fact that the caucus cannot now be held until the middle of next week is construed by the friends of Senator MORGAN as being favorable to him, as it is believed that if the Fenton element had felt strong enough it would have hastened the nomination. Gov. MORGAN's personal presence will doubtless be an effective aid to his own canvass. Considerable regret is expressed over the defeat of Senator MORRILL from Maine, though Mr. HAMLIN's return will be warmly welcomed by many friends. But it is in Missouri where the phase of affairs is most muddled. Gen. SCHURZ is confident of success. Gen. LOAN is equally so; while Senator HENDERSON's friends claim that his latent strength, to be developed when the strength of the others is exhausted, is very great. They say they regard his chances as better than in the case of his first election, when nearly the entire Press of the State was opposed to him. He is an able and shrewd politician, one of the kind that, no matter what his vicissitudes, generally turns up on the winning side. His vote on impeachment is the only blemish in the eyes of his old friends. But the unpopularity of the act has almost wholly died away, since it is conceded by even Gen. GRANT, and a majority of his supporters, that the failure of impeachment saved the Republican Party. The Missouri contest promises to be very entertaining. In West Virginia the contest is just opening. Gov. BOREMAN and Hon. CHESTER D. HUBBARD, present member of the Wheeling District, are the principal aspirants. Mr. HUBBARD has served two years with entire satisfaction, and has made a useful, sensible and practical legislator. Should he be successful, he will most worthily represent his State.

STANDARD WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

The standard metric weights and measures ordered by Congress to be furnished to each State are now undergoing manufacture. Prof. BENJAMIN PEIRCE, United States Superintendent of Weights and Measures, prepared a programme of the standards to be furnished and submitted it to the Committee on Weights and Measures of the National Academy of Sciences, who approved it. Specimens of several of the standards have been sent to the Capitol. The divided line meters are made of brass, composed of three parts of copper to one of zinc, the bar extending beyond the terminal lines. They are divided into decimeters, one decimeter into centimeters, and one centimeter into millimeters. The length between the terminal line is equal to one meter at a temperature of the bar of about 70 degrees Fahrenheit. The form of the weights is similar to the present American standard weights. They are of brass, of an ascertained specific gravity, equal, when weighed in a vacuum, to the weight of the French platinum standard. There are kilograms, demi-kilograms and grams. The standard litre or capacity measure is made of brass, of a form similar to the American standard quart, containing a volume of distilled water which, when weighed in vacuum, equals the weight of a standard kilogram in vacuum, the water being at the temperature of its greatest density and the vessel at the same temperature. These sets of standards will be completed before the close of the present year.

LOUISIANA REVENUE FRAUDS.

They have a brilliant way of carrying out their frauds in Louisiana. New-York is altogether in the shade. Mr. CRESCY, who was recently appointed Supervisor for that district, made some important seizures after his arrival there, but found that he could not use the mails for the transmission of his dispatches, which gave him an excuse for coming on to Washington for fresh instructions, as was asserted at the time. When he returned to New-Orleans he found that all the property seized, which he thought he had left in safe hands, had been mysteriously carried off to parts unknown, together with the papers implicating certain officials.

UNITED STATES PROTECTORATES.

The House Committee on Foreign Relations today voted to permit Gen. BANKS to report, without the approval of the Committee, a resolution proposing the establishment of a protectorate over the island Republics of Hayti and St. Domingo. This is the idea of Mr. SEWARD, and explains the reference to the subject in the President's message. Gen. BUTLER also has the subject very much at heart, and it is said that when he called on the President on New-Year's Day he thanked him for the allusions to the matter in his message.

THE SENATORIAL FINANCIAL CAUCUS.

Senator EDMUNDS' gold bond paying resolution turns out to have been the chief bone of contention in the Senatorial caucus yesterday. An effort was made to kill it off, but it did not succeed. It was the only proposition which received serious discussion, and the effort to divert discussion to other propositions was defeated by the adjournment.

BUSINESS IN THE HOUSE.

The House to-day was almost wholly devoted to the private calendar; afterward it went into Committee of the Whole on the West Point Appropriation bill, and a long debate followed upon the Civil Service. Gen. LOGAN delivered a carefully-prepared speech against Mr. JENCKES' bill, to which that gentleman replied at length and with much force. Mr. SHELLABARGER, who has resumed his seat much improved in health, also criticised certain administrative features of the bill, but did not oppose its principle. Both branches of Congress adjourned until Monday.

THE LATE GEN. ROUSSEAU.

The death of Gen. ROUSSEAU startled many people here, who had scarcely been made aware of his serious illness. The flags at the various military posts were lowered to half mast. This event now leaves two vacancies in the rank of Brigadier-General in the Regular Army. The first was caused by the retiring of Gen. HOOKER.

COLLECTOR SMITHER.

Mr. SMITHER and his friends are working vigorously for his confirmation. His chief champions in the Senate are Messrs. NYE and STEWART, of Nevada. His strongest opponents are Messrs. CONKLING and EDMUNDS. Mr. Surveyor WARDMAN is here urging Republican Senators to confirm Mr. SMITHER for a variety of reasons, the most forcible of which is that SMITHER wants the place.

RAILROAD LAND GRANTS.

The House Pacific Railroad Committee to-day agreed to report in favor of the bill introduced a few days ago by Mr. FRUGE, of Iowa, which provides that all railroads which have been granted lands by the United States Government, or by any State to which lands have been granted for railroad purposes, shall use iron of American manufacture or manufactured from American ore, in their construction.

MRS. MURPHY'S WAR CLAIM.

Mrs. MURPHY's claim was the text for some half a dozen speeches in the Senate again to-day. Senator HENDRICKS made an argument in favor of allowing it, and GARRETT DAVIS continued his questions from the opinions of Chief Justice MARSHALL on the same side of the question. Mr. CONKLING, Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN and others spoke against the claim, on the ground that no distinction could be made, under the laws of war, between property taken for the use of the army and property destroyed in the usual prosecution of war. This case is likely to occupy several days yet, as nearly every Senator is desirous to speak on the subject.

THE CONNECTICUT RIVER BRIDGE.

The question of the construction of the bridge across the Connecticut River will come up again to-morrow in the Senate Post Office Committee. A large lobby is here working for the defeat of the measure in the interest of the Shore Line Railroad. A number of Hartford people are also here opposing the scheme on the ground that it will interfere with the navigation of the river. Representative HUBBARD, of Connecticut, will make an argument to-morrow in favor of its erection.

WELLS, FARGO & CO.

The payment of WELLS, FARGO & Co., by the Postmaster-General, for the overland service has not yet been made, although Gov. RANDALL is scarcely warranted in withholding it by the terms of the contract; yet he does so in deference to what he supposes may be the action of the House on the resolution for investigation which will come up next Monday.

ARRIVALS IN THE CITY.

Gen. HAWLEY, of Connecticut, and Gen. INGALLS, of New-York, are among the arrivals.

Dispatches to the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Jan. 8.

THE VIRGINIA COMMITTEE.

The Committee appointed by the conference of citizens from different parts of Virginia, which met at Richmond Dec. 31, arrived here to-day. It consists of Hon. A. H. H. STUART, Chairman, Messrs. JOHN L. MERRY, Jr., of Fredericksburg, JAMES P. JOHNSON, of Bedford, W. T. SUTHERLIN, of Danville, WYNDHAM ROBERTS, of Washington County, W. S. OWEN, of Halifax, JOHN B. BALDWIN, of Augusta, JAMES ALESON, of Richmond, and J. F. SLAUGHTER, of Lynchburg. The object of the Committee in visiting Washington is to ascertain the best terms on which Virginia can be restored to the Union. The action of the Committee will conclude nothing, as it is to be submitted to a convention of delegates elected by the people, proposed to be held in Richmond on the 10th of February. The Committee had a preliminary meeting to-night.

The Committee had a private meeting to-night, at which they formally organized. The proceedings were confined to a general exchange of views delivered in a colloquial and informal manner, although the programme is considered settled. The Committee will remain in permanent organization, keeping a quorum of their body here until something is accomplished for the relief of the State. They have pledged themselves to allow no discouraging or untoward events to deter them from the earnest and persistent pursuit of this object in view. No changes will be made in the Committee, a letter having been received from WYNDHAM ROBERTSON that although detained, he would soon arrive here. The Committee will meet to-morrow at 9 o'clock, and remain in full session until Wednesday of next week, when, probably, all but a quorum will go home, with the understanding that some will return and relieve those here on duty, thus keeping constantly in session, prepared to take advantage of any circumstance which may arise towards accomplishing the object of their meeting.

INTERNATIONAL POSTAGE.

A cable dispatch states that the system of a penny postage between Great Britain and this country is advocated by a large number of the members of the new British Parliament; that a memorial, signed by hundreds of the members of Parliament, has been presented to REVERDY JOHNSON, requesting him to urge the American Government to adopt a system of penny postage between the United States and Great Britain; that the London Times prints the memorial and comments favorably thereon. This is gratifying to Postmaster-General RANDALL, who favors cheap rates of international postage. In negotiating the present postal convention with Great Britain, which went into operation the 1st of January inst., the United States office proposed and urged a further reduction of the international letter rate of postage, but without success, the British office declining any reduction. Important reductions of postage to Great Britain and the countries on the Continent of Europe, amounting to about one-half of the rates previously charged, have been made by recent postal conventions with those countries, and Postmaster-General RANDALL is ready and anxious to further reduce the present rates of postage to the lowest practicable standard.

GEN. BURBANKS.

Brevet Brig. Gen. BURBANKS has been relieved from duty as Assistant Commissioner of the Freedmens' Bureau in the State of Kentucky, and Brevet Col. B. P. BUNKER, Major of the Forty-fifth Infantry, (Veteran Reserve,) is ordered to that duty.

DEATH OF GEN. ROUSSEAU.

Official information was received at the War Department this morning, from Brevet Maj. Gen. BUCHANAN, dated New Orleans, announcing the death of Gen. LOVELL H. ROUSSEAU. He died at 11 o'clock last night, of congestion of the bowels, after three days' illness.

GEN. FRANK BLAIR.

Gen. FRANCIS P. BLAIR had an interview with the President this morning.

THE INTERNATIONAL PACIFIC RAILROAD.

Information has been received that the Texas Convention has passed an ordinance giving the right of way to the International Pacific Railroad from the eastern to the western border of that State, and a reservation of twenty miles on each side of the road; the road to be completed within six years. This road is one of the connecting links of the international line from Cairo to San Blas on the Pacific Ocean. The Texas Convention is debating the question of dividing the State.

A CLAIM FOR SALVAGE.

The Secretary of War transmitted to the House today the claim of the officers and crew of the United States steamer De Soto, for salvage against the United States steamer Leviathan. He says the claim was presented to the War Department, but there was no appropriation for the payment of it. The Secretary suggests that it be made a matter of inquiry as to whether the public advantage would not be promoted by a repeal of the statute, allowing salvage to salvors of public vessels where the parties belong to the public armed service. It would seem to be questionable justice that the United States should be called upon to pay for services rendered its own vessels in distress by its own officers and crews. The subject was referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

THE SUPREME COURT.

The following motions were disposed of in the Supreme Court:

No. 329.—Davidson et al. vs. Horston; No. 330, same vs. King; No. 331, same vs. McMahon; motions to dismiss were argued.

No. 361.—Evans vs. McClane, in error to the District Court of West Virginia; on motion of Edwin M. Stanton the writ of error was dismissed without prejudice to the plaintiff in error, and to sue out a new writ.

No. 416.—Coyle et al. vs. Allen et al.; appeal from the Supreme Court for the District of Columbia; docketed and dismissed with costs.

No. 15.—Emerson et al. vs. Bounding; motion argued by Mr. Stanbery.

No. 417.—Steamer Union and cargo vs. the United States; No. 418.—Schooner Julia and cargo vs. the United States; No. 419.—The schooner Thomas and cargo vs. the United States; No. 420.—Schooner Jane and cargo vs. the United States; appeals from District Court for the District of Florida, docketed and dismissed on motion of Mr. ASHTON.

No. 381.—Dunmore vs. Thro et al.—Appeal from Circuit Court for Louisiana; dismissed.

No. 179.—Bark Grape Shot, GEORGE LAW claimant vs. Mosses; motion to dismiss argued in part, and further argument postponed to next Friday.

No. 31.—GREEN vs. VAN BUREN; No. 32.—THELEMIAR vs. Same; argument of these cases was continued by Mr. R. TOWNSEND.

The argument in the case of GEO. W. WAITE et al., an original case in equity, has been fixed by the Supreme Court for the first day in February. This suit involves many important questions in connection with the disposal of Texas bonds in that State during the rebellion.

FORTIETH CONGRESS.

THIRD SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Friday, Jan. 8.

Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Vermont, in relation to reciprocity of trade with Canada, upon which he said he desired to make some remarks hereafter. The resolution takes the ground that the matter should be regulated by Congress instead of by treaty.

THE MORNING HOUR.

On motion of Mr. HARLAN, the Senate took up, amended and passed the bill to regulate the appointment of a Recorder of Deeds and Warden of the jail in the District of Columbia.

Mr. RICE introduced a bill to create a new judicial district in Kentucky. Referred to the Judiciary Committee and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PATTERSON, of New-Hampshire, introduced a bill to repeal the usury laws in the District of Columbia, and a bill relating to judicial proceedings in the District of Columbia. Referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. SHERMAN introduced a bill to regulate the price and encourage production of cotton in the United States. Referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

The bill provides that after the 1st of July next the Secretary of the Treasury shall be authorized to purchase all raw cotton grown in the United States; this bill, when the same shall be delivered at any railway station making direct running communication with the City of New-York, at 25 cents per pound for Uplands and 30 cents for Sea Islands, provided it be in good merchantable order and put up in bales of 400 pounds each. The purchases may be made through the Internal Revenue Collectors. Cotton so sold shall be exempt from tax, but if sold to other parties than agents of the United States, a tax of 2½ cents per pound shall be levied. The cotton purchased by the Government shall be sold in New-York, at a price not less than 5 cents per pound in advance of the purchase price, reckoning the expenses of transportation thereof thereto, and the latter, but manufacturers of cotton within the United States shall be allowed a drawback of 99 cents per pound upon the quantity used by them. A full report of all transactions under the foregoing provisions shall be laid before Congress at the commencement of every regular session.

RAILROAD LAND GRANTS.

Mr. POMEROY, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported back, without amendment, the bill granting lands to the State of Wisconsin to aid in the construction of the Green Bay and Lake Pepin Railway. Ten alternate sections per mile are granted on each side of the road.

THE COURT OF CLAIMS.

Mr. FOWLER introduced a bill to amend the act of July 4, 1864, to regulate the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims, which was referred to the Committee on Judiciary. It provides for the payment to citizens of such States as are now entitled to the benefits of said act of claims for stores furnished to the Engineer and Ordnance Departments of the army.

VETERANS OF THE MEXICAN WAR.

Mr. COLE presented the petition of A. M. EVANS, agent of the Associated Veterans of the Mexican war, asking the establishment of a branch of the Soldiers' Home for the Pacific Coast, admitting soldiers who served in Mexico on the same footing with those soldiers who have served continuously twenty years.

Referred to the Military Committee.

LAND GRANTS.

On motion of Mr. WILLIAMS the Senate took up and after a brief debate passed the bill to grant lands to aid in the construction of a military wagon road from Coos Bay to Roseburg, Oregon.

On motion of Mr. THAYER a bill to confirm the title to certain lands in Nebraska, and a bill supplementary thereto, were taken up and passed.

PRIVATE WAR CLAIMS.

The morning hour having expired, the bill for the relief of REN MURPHY, of Decatur, Ala., again came up for consideration.

Mr. HENDRICKS being entitled to the floor, said that the bill seemed to him so obviously just that he could not understand why the Senators opposed it; Mrs. MURPHY having been always a loyal citizen of the United States was clearly entitled to payment for her property, taken by the Government for a public use; and who ever wished to have her claims rejected, on the ground that if it and others like it were allowed, their amount would be greater than the people could afford to pay, should be prepared to say that the bonds of the Government should be repudiated on the same grounds; the obligation to pay the bonds, rested merely on a contract; but the obligation to pay for property in such a case as this rested on higher grounds, an express constitutional provision. It had been objected to this claim, that the property taken, was in an enemy's country. But this was not the fact. Decatur was within the lines of the United States Army, and the authority of the Government had been already reëstablished there. In reply to the argument made against the bill, on the ground, that Mrs. MURPHY, being a citizen and resident of Alabama, must necessarily have been a public enemy, he cited the declaration of a prominent Republican, Gov. MORTON, in September, 1865, that the war was waged to suppress an insurrection of individuals, not States, and that such individuals who participated in that insurrection, was personally responsible. Mrs. MURPHY, he said, never ceased to be a loyal citizen of the United States, and therefore could not be held in any degree responsible for the disloyalty of her neighbors.

Mr. CONKLING asked whether if Mrs. MURPHY's claim rested on the ground that she was a citizen of the United States, whose property, having been taken for public use, should be paid? If the fact of her loyalty increased her citizenship or made her claim stronger than the claim of a citizen who had not been loyal?

Mr. HENDRICKS declined to discuss the merits of any other claim than the one before the Senate. The fidelity of the claimant in this case to her Government had never been questioned, and although, therefore, the obligation of the Government to pay for the property taken for public use is apparent, yet the obligation might be questioned in the case of a person who had taken part in an insurrection. The people although they had to pay for many things that they could never to pay for were yet able to pay every right and just claim like that of Mrs. MURPHY.

Mr. CONKLING said he had convinced himself that the bill was more important in its relations to the finances of the Government than any other that would be likely to come up this session, and he thought that if the object of the Government were to make the war odious and dispose of its own intelligence and integrity, the object could be attained by passing the bill. In 1864, when her property was destroyed, the claimant was a citizen of Alabama—a portion of the country which had previously been proclaimed by the President to be in a state of insurrection.

Mr. HOWE remarked that what the President in his proclamation had said, was not that Alabama was in insurrection, but there was an insurrection.

Mr. CONKLING said he had once heard a Judge say that a contract for the sale of a horse applied to his head, his tail, and the whole of him, and by a parity of reasoning he supposed that when a State or a country, or any entire geographical thing was named, the whole of it was named.

Mr. HOWE asked him whether if a newspaper paragraph should state that the small-pox had broken out in the State of New-York, it must be understood that it prevailed throughout the whole State; if not, whether an insurrection might not break out in a State without involving the whole State.

Mr. CONKLING supposed this question to be meant for a pleasantry, and thought that as such it must have some merit, because it made the Senator from Indiana (Mr. HENDRICKS's) laugh. He repeated that the President's Proclamation, with the force given to it by the decisions of the Supreme Court, had the effect of making the whole of the State of Alabama enemies' territory. No valid claim could be made for property destroyed in that territory, and the loyalty or disloyalty of the claimant was wholly immaterial, because the constitutional provision under which the claim was made, recognized no such distinction.

Messrs. FRELINGHUYSEN, and PATTERSON of New-Hampshire followed in opposition to the bill.

Mr. DAVIS asked Senators FRELINGHUYSEN or CONKLING to state distinctly what law they relied upon to authorize the taking of the property of Mrs. MURPHY.

Mr. PATTERSON replied that it was taken, he supposed, under the military law which in time of war authorizes either party to take the property necessary in order to carry out the objects of the war.

Mr. DAVIS asked the same gentleman, or either of them, to give a categorical answer to the question, whether, upon the theory that the States in insurrection were the enemy's territory, the property of ANDREW JOHNSON, a citizen of Tennessee, of Judge WAYNE, a citizen of Georgia, situated in the District of Columbia, was liable to be seized during the war as Mrs. MURPHY's property had been seized?

Mr. PATTERSON replied that that case would be parallel with the case of a Mr. GRAHAM, previously cited by him, who had been refused payment by the War Department for certain sugar of his taken in New-Orleans for the use of the army, and he saw no reason why ANDREW JOHNSON should be treated differently; and, by way of further reply he asked Mr. DAVIS, whether Mr. JOHNSON because of his loyalty would be entitled to payment for property destroyed in battle.

Mr. DAVIS answered that the Senator from New-Hampshire, with the adroitness characteristic of the section which he represented, had attempted to answer his question by asking another. (Laughter.) But he insisted upon a

THE NATIONAL FINANCES.

A New Financial Scheme—Resumption of Specie Payments—The Duty of Congress.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Jan. 4, 1869.

The questions which, more than all others, engage the public attention now, are the currency, the national debt, taxation and the public expenditures.

PUBLIC EXPENDITURES.

With regard to public expenditures the duty of Congress is plain, if the Republican party is to maintain itself in power. They must be reduced, and there is ample room for reduction in the army, the navy, in the number of clerkships and officers of various grades, in the number of foreign ministers—in short, in every department of the Government.

The annual report of the Postmaster General shows a deficit in the last fiscal year of $6,497,591 85. This may be readily accounted for. The compensation to railroads in New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and Ohio, since June 30, 1868, for carrying mails, has been increased at the rate of $150,320 70, while it should have been reduced, in view of the general reduction in all other prices. And this is a specimen. And yet no movement has been made to look into this enormity.

Every department report has made demands which would greatly increase expenditures. Let this be speedily met by retrenchment.

TAXATION.

Under the wise lead of Gen. SCHENCK, the able Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee in the House, a system of internal taxation has been and is being perfected which imposes the burdens of taxation mainly on luxuries and accumulated wealth, and a Republican Congress has, in this respect, fully met the just expectations of the whole country.

THE NATIONAL DEBT.

The national debt is a fixed fact. The Democratic rebellion, aided by the Democratic Party, is responsible for it all. Whether it might have been less or greater, it must be paid. The rate of interest on it ought to be reduced as soon as practicable. This can be done by authorizing a new loan, payable, principal and interest, in gold coin, free from all taxes, with annual interest at the rate of four or four and a half per cent., payable half-yearly, on thirty and forty-year bonds, giving the holders of existing bonds the option to exchange them for the new bonds, and by declaring that if the option is refused the Secretary of the Treasury shall redeem them as rapidly as the present laws will permit, (which is in five years from the date of the 5-20 bonds,) and whenever there may be money in the Treasury that can be so applied. Let the Funding bill of July be re-enacted.

THE CURRENCY.

Our currency now consists of greenbacks, $356,000,0000; fractional currency, $24,000,000; national bank notes, $300,000,000; coin in Treasury, $68,000,000, and perhaps $150,000,000 among the people, including that in the Pacific States and Territories, or a total of $928,000,000.

In 1860 we had bank notes, $200,000,000; coin in banks, $88,000,000; coin in hands of the people, $150,000,000, or a total of $440,000,000.

Congress, in conformity with the demand of the people, has decided that there shall be no reduction in the volume of currency.

CONTRACTION OF THE CURRENCY.

There is just now a clamor for resumption of specie payments. If Congress should contract the currency one half resumption might take place. But the effect would be that all values would be changed by a reduction of from 33 to 50 per cent. This would ruin the debtor class and bring wide-spread bankruptcy. It would add 50 per cent. to the value of the $2,500,000,000 of national debt, the $600,000,000 of debt to the national banks, the $4,000,000,000 or more of private indebtedness, the $200,000,000 of internal revenue tax, besides taxes under State authority reaching annually $200,000,000 more, while it would diminish the means of payment. A contraction of the currency cannot be tolerated. It would lead to panic, stay laws, bankruptcy worse than confiscation.

IS RESUMPTION DESIRABLE?

The people were never more prosperous than now. More wealth has been added to our cities, our farms, our manufactures, in the last three years than in any equal period prior thereto. The only drawback on our complete prosperity grows out of the fact that the value of greenbacks fluctuate, and by reason of our high prices for labor and the products of industry, our market invites excessive importations without corresponding exports, thereby annually draining us of coin, leaving a balance of trade against us, which is paid by exporting coin and national bonds. If it were not for the terrible ordeal of returning to gold prices and resumption, it might be desirable to approximate the currency and prices of other nations of the world; but a process which brings ruin for years is too costly, and should be avoided. If we could avoid fluctuations in the value of gold and greenbacks and change the balance of trade, then there can be no pressing necessity for haste in resuming specie payments. The country would then prosper quite as well if we did not resume for a century. These evils can be avoided. If Congress will authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase greenbacks at seventy-five cents in gold on the dollar, leaving them a legal tender for taxes and debts at par, greenbacks can never fluctuate in value, and men can safely buy and make investments confident of a sale upon equivalent values. Let Congress increase the duty on those foreign commodities which the Secretary of the Treasury, in his report, says produce $90,000,000 of revenue annually from imported luxuries, and the balance of trade will be turned in our favor, we will cease to export gold or bonds, the product of our mines of $80,000,000 will furnish coin, and new vigor will be given to our productive industry. The Secretary of the Treasury can keep the necessary supply of coin from duties on imports, or, if necessary, by loans on gold bonds. We will cease to export gold or bonds, and our people will go on prospering.

A PLAN OF RESUMPTION.

But if we must hasten resumption, let us make haste slowly.

Let me propose a plan of resumption by a law which shall provide—

1. That the Secretary of the Treasury shall purchase with gold coin the greenbacks at seventy-five cents on the dollar by July 1, and at an advance of one-third of one per cent. on this rate during each month thereafter until the price reaches par, when complete resumption will come. The greenbacks to be reissued and kept in circulation so as to avoid the evils of contraction.

2. The Secretary to have power to apply the gold coin received from Customs to redemption in this form, and if necessary to borrow money on gold bonds running thirty and forty years, at 4 and 4½ per cent., exempt from all tax.

3. The Secretary to pay the interest on existing bonds in coin as the law requires, but the holders to have the option to take greenbacks at the price the Secretary may be paying for them in gold. If practicable, let custom duties be paid in gold, or in greenbacks at gold rates.

4. Collect revenues under Internal Revenue laws in the Pacific States in coin, but allowing the premium to make the taxes equal to greenback rates.

5. The National Banks to receive the interest on their national bonds in greenbacks, at the same rate of discount, however, at which they may be redeemable by the Secretary of the Treasury in gold. The banks, of course, can demand their interest in gold, but they may accept greenbacks at the rates stated as a part of the consideration for the privileges the Government may grant them.

6. Legalize coin contracts when made on a coin consideration.

This plan avoids all fluctuations in the value of greenbacks, secures gradual resumption of specie payments, provides the means for it, avoids the shock and panic and bankruptcy of a sudden change of values, and will accomplish the desired result. Most of the individual indebtedness of the country falls due within two years, and can be liquidated substantially on the basis of present values.

England did not resume specie payments for nearly twenty years after her great wars. She did it after due notice and preparation, but her historians tell us the sudden change of values for a time diminished her commerce and produced great bankruptcy. If we in like manner adopt any plan which raises the value of greenbacks to gold by one gradation, the change of values will bring ruin upon us. This plan avoids all dangers.

As we approximate the gold standard there should be a gradual increase of the tariff on luxuries to prevent the export of gold and bonds. This is submitted as one of the plans which may claim the attention of Congress. If it be said that this scaling of the greenbacks is repudiation in part; I answer it is no worse than to refuse to pay gold for them at any rate whatever, as the Government has been doing for six years past. It does not profess to be resumption until par is reached in six years and three months.

The resumption of specie payments, it is agreed on all hands, will bring a general reduction of prices. It is true greenbacks will be raised to the value of gold, but gold will continue the basis and measure of values. As prices are now generally measured by greenbacks, less valuable by thirty-three per cent. than gold, when resumption takes place prices of property will be reduced thirty-three per cent. on present nominal values. This fact demonstrates that immediate resumption would ruin the debtor class, even if it should be practicable. If the present paper prices were to continue after resumption, the country would be drained of all its gold in ninety days. The importers of foreign goods, now sold on a gold basis, would have an increase of thirty-three per cent., which would so increase imports as to drain the country of all its gold and ruin all manufacturing industry. Musical Publications.

—SCHUBERTH & Co. have just published a composition which will probably secure a more enduring favor than most parlor music. It is entitled "Reverie Poétique," and Mr. WILLIAM MASON, whose inspiration has been derived from the poesy of VICTOR HUGO, is its author. The composition consists of a brief and expressive theme treated without meretricious ornamentation in slow movements. It is not so filled with technical difficulties as to be unintelligible as the embodiment of a distinct and complete idea, and not so simple in form but that its preparation denotes the skill and science of a very accomplished musician. Persons who look among the musical publications of the day for works of a higher stamp than most writers have accustomed them to, will recognise in Mr. MASON'S "Reverie Poétique" a production combining attractiveness with positive worth.

—Messrs. W. A. POND & Co. have just put forth a number of new publications. The most important of them are two additional numbers of the favorite melodies of JULES EGGHARD, one a mélodie étude, called "Le Champ de Fleurs," the other a morceau entitled "Les Etoiles Filantes," and both agreeable specimens of parlor music, and not above the execution of pianists of average skill. "Hidden Love" is an English version of "La Chanson de Fortunio," by OFFENBACH, a brief melody of a sweet and sad cast, and as undeveloped as are most of the ideas of the new popular maestro. Among the other novelties issued by POND & Co.—all similar in point of perfect typographical correctness and beauty—are to be noted "Le Trot du Cavalier," a characteristic composition by FRITZ SPINDLER, whose attempt at illustrating musically the title of the piece is somewhat more satisfactory than many more ambitious efforts of the kind have been; "The Mansion House Galop," by Miss C. O. OSGOOD; "Murray Hill Waltz," by JULIEN B. MEYER, and "The Bashful Girl," one of those peculiar songs which have been forced upon us by the full-fledged furor for English extravaganzas, and which are worthless enough—from a musical standpoint—on the stage, without being sung by amateurs to a halting accompaniment on the piano.

GOVERNMENT TELEGRAPH.

A Recommendation by Postmaster-General Randall to Congress that the Telegraph be United with the Post Office Department—Objections to the Present System.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 7, 1869.

SIR: The attention of Congress and of the public has within two or three years been repeatedly directed to the consideration of the union of the telegraph with the postal service. There is a growing conviction in the public mind that a method of transmitting intelligence now so little used is capable of a greater extension; that an instrumentality which affects the interests of the whole community in so many ways should not be controlled by private individuals as private property nor be used for private profit, and made subservient to private interests. When the cheapness of the mails is compared with the high rates of the telegraph, the simplicity and uniformity of the one with the frequent and complex charges of the other, the public instinctively feel that it would be desirable to have the same simplicity and uniformity in the rates for the transmission of messages by telegraph as by mail, with the lowest rates which the nature of the service admits. It also feels that private companies necessarily conduct their business with a view, primarily, to private profit, and consider the interest and convenience of the public only so far as the securing of dividends may be promoted thereby. The extent to which this subject has been discussed of late shows that the time has arrived when it should be fully considered by the Department and Congress, to see if any change can be made for the public good. Such an inquiry leads to an examination of other systems and their results, and to a comparison of these with our own.

The subject of the telegraph was first brought before the public in 1857. In February of that year the House of Representatives passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be requested to report to the House of Representatives at its next session upon the propriety of establishing a system of telegraphs for the United States.

In March the Secretary issued a circular requesting information upon the subject. His report contained Prof. MORSE'S plan for an electric telegraph, and it concluded with the statement "that he was satisfied that the establishment of a system of telegraphs for the United States would be useful to commerce as well as to the Government. It might most properly be made appurtenant to the Post Office Department." Subsequently Prof. MORSE petitioned Congress for aid in bringing out his invention, and in 1843 a bill was passed appropriating $30,000 for the construction of a line between Washington and Baltimore, and the Appropriation bill for the same session contained an item of $12,000 to defray the expenses of operating the line during the first year. In 1844 the first electric telegraph in the world was constructed under the supervision of Prof. MORSE, with the Government appropriation. A bill was introduced at the next session of Congress for the extension of the line to New-York, but it did not pass. The success of the first enterprise induced the construction of many other lines by private corporations, and, at the time the telegraph was introduced upon the Continent of Europe, Portland was connected by the telegraph with Government lines to Boston, and New-York with Chicago and St. Louis.

The ruling principle held by the continental Governments has been that telegraphic correspondence is analogous to other correspondence. The importance of possessing permanent and reliable means of telegraphic communication is considered to be in proportion to which the necessity of a sufficient postal service. Throughout the whole of continental Europe the telegraph is under the exclusive control and management of the respective Governments. The postal telegraph system has been carried to the greatest perfection in Belgium and Switzerland. In these countries the rates have been lowered the facilities for the receipt and delivery of messages the greatest, and the enterprise most profitable both to the State and the people. The investigation into the operations of this system shows:

First—That in Belgium and Switzerland, where the rates are low and uniform, the telegraph is much used, and that the receipts in those two countries have exceeded the cost of construction, maintenance and operation, twenty words being allowed to each message, including date and signature. The annual number of messages in Switzerland average nearly one to every two persons; in Belgium one to every three persons, if the United States, estimating the number of messages annually transmitted at 6,000,000, one to every six.

Second—That the rates for inland messages in Belgium and Switzerland, where the greatest distance of transmission is 200 miles, is one-half a franc. The rates for transit and international messages are higher, varying with the distance. That the average cost of each message is three-quarters of a franc, the average receipts four-fifths of a franc. In France the rates in the same department are one-half a franc between different departments; greatest distance, 600 miles, one franc on twelve and eight-tenths cents and twenty-five and six-tenths cents currency.

Third—That the rates have been reduced from time to time as the business increased; that every great reduction of rates has been followed by a large and immediate increase of new kinds of business, reducing the proportionate expense of each message.

Fourth—That the facilities afforded for the reception and delivery of messages are very great and equally distributed over the country. So great are these facilities that in Switzerland one-half of the stations do not average more than two messages a day.

Fifth—That the telegraph is but little used by the Press, an organization like the "Associated Press" being unknown.

Sixth—That by the union of the telegraph with the post a great saving is made in the expense of the telegraph, without any corresponding increase of expense to the Post Office.

If the system has succeeded with low rates where distances are short and the population small, and in countries where the habits of the people and political conditions are such that their use makes but little use of its lines, and where the chief advantages of the telegraph cannot therefore be realized, it must be more successful in our own country, with its vast extent (where the telegraph anticipates by days the letter sent by mail,) its favorable climate and its increasing millions. The telegraph in England has been controlled by private companies, and in that respect resembles our own system. Companies were organized and lines constructed as soon as the result of Mr. MORSE'S experiment was known. There has been little competition as compared with that which has extended to the United States; and rates, originally high, have always been uniform for like distances and have been reduced from time to time, as the business has increased. The profits have been large, increasing with each reduction of rates. The intimate relations between Great Britain and the Continent made British merchants familiar with the working of both systems and the superiority of the continental over the English has long caused dissatisfaction among them. Their reiterated complaints finally induced the Postmaster-General to examine into the merits of the post system, and in 1866 a report upon the subject was made by him to Parliament. This report stated as the opinion of persons well qualified to judge—

First—That the charges for the transmission of messages are too high and tend to check the growth of telegraphic correspondence.

Second—That there is very often great delay in transmission and inaccuracy in rendering the message.

Third—That many important towns are unprovided with facilities for telegraphic communication.

Fourth—That in the great majority of places the office is inconveniently situated and open for too short a time.

Fifth—That little or no improvement can be expected while its working is conducted by companies striving chiefly to earn a dividend and engaged in a wasteful competition with each other.

Sixth—That under the existing system, the development of telegraphic correspondence has been retarded.

Seventh—That the growth of such correspondence has been greatly stimulated in Belgium and Switzerland.

Eighth—That in England like results would follow, and from the annexation of the telegraph to the Post Office would accrue great advantage to the public, and, ultimately, a large revenue to the State.

A supplemental report was made in February, 1868, in which the arguments in opposition to the union of the two systems were considered. These arguments were intended to prove that the cost of land messages in Belgium resulted in a dead loss of thirty-four per cent.; that any considerable extension of the system in England would involve an annual loss to the State; that village postmasters and postmistresses were totally unfit to work the telegraph; that the cost of delivering and collecting the messages by the letter carriers would be very great; that the consolidation and amalgamation of the different companies could be better effected by the companies themselves.

To this the Postmaster-General replied that, though there had been a loss on the inland messages transmitted in Belgium, that was occasioned in part by the fact that the telegraphic services of the State and railroads were performed without charge; that the number of these messages, 364,000, against 692,686 inland messages, the charges for which would have exceeded the actual loss; that, although the reduction in rates of one-half had not sufficed to reduce by one-half the average cost of each inland message, yet but for the extraordinary increase in the number of inland messages the loss of other messages would have remained the same, instead of being largely reduced; there would have been less loss on the inland service, but a smaller profit on the other service; that it was proposed to extend the lines gradually and to such places as would pay; that postmasters and postmistresses have worked and are working telegraph instruments in several places; that toys were found in many public offices, and in private establishments they are intrusted to warehousemen, porters, cellar men; that instead of there being greater delays in delivery they would be free and rapid; that an extension of the duties and compensation of the Postmasters could give increased efficiency for both services; that the substitution of a consolidated management with one set of officers and offices must effect a large saving in expense over a divided management and triple establishment at present employed in the conduct of a business with which one management and one establishment could easy cope. The report further states that the limited development of the system in comparison with the Belgian service is shown by the fact that if there had been the same proportion of telegrams to letters in Great Britain as in Belgium, there would have been 19,100,000 telegrams transmitted instead of 6,000,000. These reports were referred to a committee of the House of Commons, who heard evidence upon the various points raised and reported the Telegraphic act of 1868. The preamble contained the reasons for the passage of the act:

Whereas, The means of communication by electric telegraph within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland are insufficient, and many important districts are without any such means of communication; and

Whereas, It would be attended with great advantage to the State, as well as the inhabitants, if there were to the public generally, if a cheaper, more widely extended and more expeditious system of telegraph were established within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and to that end it is expedient that Her Majesty's Postmaster-General be empowered to work telegraphs in connection with the administration of the Post Office.

The act enables the Postmaster-General to purchase the existing lines of telegraph, maintain and work them. It fixes the rates at one shilling, without regard to distance, for the first twenty words of each message, provides for free special delivery and the reception of messages at every street letter box and Post Office in the Kingdom. The act does not take effect until another act shall have been passed by Parliament putting at the disposal of the Postmaster the moneys requisite for carrying into effect the objects of the act.

The first action taken by Congress in reference to the union of the Post Office and telegraph was a resolution reported by Hon. WM. HIXON in March, 1866, from the Committee of Post Roads of the House, calling upon the Postmaster-General to lay before the Senate all the information in his possession in regard to the feasibility and usefulness of establishing telegraphic lines in connection with the mail routes for the transmission of Government and private business. This resolution was supported by Hon. B. GRATZ BROWN and adopted. In order that he might obtain the necessary information my predecessor, Mr. W. DENNISON, addressed interrogatories to HENRY J. BOGERS, telegraphic engineer; GEORGE B. PRESCOTT, author of a work on the telegraph; the officers of the telegraph of the American, Western Union and United States Telegraph Companies. From them he obtained information in regard to the cost of construction and maintenance of lines of telegraph, the effect of a reduction of rates and competition with Government, and other facts in regard to the operation of the system. Their answers were appended to his letter in reply to the resolution of the Senate. This letter stated that the Senate resolution contemplated the establishment of the telegraph along the principal mail routes only; that this would require 23,741 miles of telegraph; that the cost of construction of six wire lines on those routes would be $18,189,760; that as the result of his investigation he was of the opinion that it would not be wise for the Government to inaugurate the proposed system of telegraphy as a part of the postal service, not only because of its doubtful financial success, but also its questionable feasibility under our political system. The gentlemen interrogated, with the exception of Mr. ROGERS, were then and are still connected with the telegraph companies. In December, 1866, bills were introduced in the House by Mr. KASSON and by Mr. E. B. WASHBURNE for the construction of telegraph lines by the Postmaster-General. These bills did not pass. In March, 1868, Mr. E. B. WASHBURNE again introduced a bill for the same purpose. It provides for the construction of a telegraph line with four wires, by the Postmaster-General, between New-York and Washington, with offices at any Post Office on the line, the rates to be uniform and at one cent for each word exclusive of address and signature, provided that no message shall be sent for a less sum than ten cents, with three cents for postage and two cents for delivery, with the right of reducing rates in order to compete with private companies if necessary.

Whenever the union of the telegraph with the Post Office Department has been heretofore considered, it has been proposed that the Department should either construct or purchase lines of telegraph extending over the whole country, at a large expense, or construct an experimental line between Washington and New-York, which would have to compete with lines extending over the entire country. These lines would charge a less price than the Government between those two places, and the experiment would probably prove a failure. This would throw discredit upon the postal system. Neither of these plans has met with the approval of the Department, and both are open to many objections. If these objections could be obviated, the advantages which will arise from the introduction of a postal telegraph are apparent upon a silent examination of the subject. In their operation the telegraph and the post have many things in common. Both are for the transmission of correspondence. The same offices, generic management, clerks and books would answer equally well for the reception, stamping, forwarding, distribution and delivery of messages and letters. Nearly all of these expenses now incurred by telegraph companies would be saved, and great reductions in rates be made. Great additional facilities for the reception and delivery of messages would be afforded, greater confidence and security would be reposed in the system, the country would be freed from a monopoly oppressive to the public—a monopoly which now endeavors to control the daily Press by compelling newspaper proprietors to agree to employ one company exclusively to transmit to and from all places reached by its lines all telegraphic messages relating to the news or newspaper business, and that they will not, in any way, encourage or support any opposition or competing companies. The transmission of the mail has always been performed by contract, and there is no reason why the same plan should not be adopted by the Post Office Department for the transmission of correspondence by telegraph. Such a method will obviate the objections heretofore entertained by Congress and the Department. A thorough examination of the subject has satisfied me that the Department can arrange for the reception and delivery of messages, the furnishing stamps and keeping the accounts, without any great increase in the number of clerks, that the business may be made the source of revenue to the Government, and thus the efficiency of the country Postmasters may be increased by employing them in connection with the telegraph.

In June last Mr. WILLIAM L. BURT, the Postmaster of Boston, informed me that gentlemen of means and high standing in that city had consulted with him as to the propriety of organizing a company, under a charter from Congress, for the transmission of messages in connection with the Post Office Department, by contract, substantially in the same manner as the mails are now transmitted by contract. As the plan seemed feasible and the rates proposed were, in the opinion of the Department, reasonable, a bill was submitted in July last to incorporate the United States Postal Telegraph Company and to establish a postal telegraph system. In August last I requested one of those gentlemen, Mr. GARDINER G. HUBBARD, to prepare a statement of the operations of the telegraph systems in Europe and this country. This has been made as full as was practicable in the limited time allowed. In regard to the operations of the telegraph in this country the investigation shows:

First—That the telegraph is relatively less used here than in Belgium or Switzerland, and the use confined to a few kinds of business, the high rates prohibiting its general use for most kinds of business and classes of people, with the exception of Press messages. For these the rates are low, and its use by the Press is very extensive, and probably exceeds a similar use abroad by ten to one.

Second—That the rates are arbitrary and exorbitant, varying in amounts for the same distances on different lines—often higher to a nearer than to a more remote station on the same line. A table was prepared by Mr. HUBBARD with the rates to a large number of stations at different distances from Boston to Chicago and New-Orleans. According to this table the average rates to offices within 500 miles of Boston were 41 cents; Chicago, 99 cents; New-Orleans, $1 61. The average rates between 500 and 1,000 miles of the same cities are, respectively, $1 45, $3 06 and $2 94. The average rates between 1,000 and 1,500 miles are $2 45, $2 91 and $3 11, and the average rates between 1,500 and 2,000 miles are, Boston $9 36 and New-Orleans $4 21. These rates are to stations supposed to present a fair average. A large majority of messages are transmitted less than 500 miles. The rates vary greatly in different sections of the country. In the South they are nearly twice as high as in the West, in the West more than twice as high as in the East, while the Eastern or lowest rates are more than twice as high as the rates in Belgium, Switzerland and France.

Third—That the lines are poorly constructed, of poor material, and are kept in operation only because our climate is dry and that there is less escape of electric fluid than in England, where such lines as ours would be useless for the earning of dividends.

Fourth—That while a large portion of the expenses are the same whether the wires are in use or not, commercial messages are practically transmitted but six twenty-fourths of the time, thus burdening a limited number of messages with expenses that would be distributed among four times the number if the wires were kept constantly employed.

Fifth—That by the union of the telegraph with the Post Office a great saving will be made in the expenses of the telegraph without a corresponding increase of expense to the Department, the cost of receiving and delivering each message being little more than for each letter. The expense to the Post Office is, therefore, only increased in the proportion that the number of messages bears to the number of letters. In this country the ratio is as seven messages to seven hundred and twenty letters.

Sixth—That by a reduction of rates and uniformity of charge new kinds of business will be created and many people will freely use the telegraph who are now prevented by the expense.

There is no country in the world so favorable for the development of the telegraph as the United States, and when messages shall be transmitted from the West to the East at the same rate that was formerly paid on a postage on letters, few merchants will use the slower mail. There is no doubt that railroad and telegraph lines for the transmission of the mails and telegraphic messages can be constructed and maintained at cheaper rates by private parties than by the Government. Nor can there be any doubt that the transmission of correspondence, whether by mail or telegraph, is too important an interest to be intrusted entirely to private enterprise. Under the postal telegraph system now proposed the advantages of private enterprise and Government control are combined, while the principal defects of each are avoided. The entire system will be in harmony with the present postal service, letters and messages will be received and delivered by the Department and transmitted under contract with private parties. The peculiar features of the proposed plan are:

First—The incorporation of a company with authority to construct lines of telegraph on the post roads and routes of the country, its capital fixed at $200 for each mile of wire. This sum is large enough for the construction of good lines, with a fair margin for profit, and will prevent any undue inflation of capital.

Second—The establishment of a postal telegraph system which shall include:

1. The establishment of postal telegraph offices in connection with the post offices in every city and village of 5,000 inhabitants and over, at railroad stations and at such other places on the lines of the wires as the telegraph business of the country may from time to time demand.

2. The prepayment of all telegraphic messages by stamps, and their reception at every postal telegraph office, post office and street letter-box.

3. The transmission of messages by telegraph between postal telegraph offices by contract with a telegraph company; provided that no bid shall be received in which the rate for messages of twenty words or figures or less, exceeds twenty cents for each message, and five cents for each added five words or figures or less, for each and every five hundred miles or fractional part thereof, to which is to be added five cents for postage and delivery.

4. The special immediate free delivery of every message by carriers within the limit of free delivery of letters from any post office, or within one mile of any postal telegraph office, and the delivery at special rates beyond such limits; provided, however, that messages directed to be transmitted by night shall not be delivered until the next morning.

5. The transmission of messages by mail without extra charge to or from the nearest postal telegraph office when received at or directed to any place not having such an office.

6. The transmission by telegraph of postal money orders, the transmission of the original message in special cases, by mail, priority in transmission, the repetition of messages and delivery to the sender. The transmission of messages where the whole amount of the rate has not been prepaid, and the transmission of messages between the largest cities by autographic instruments or in cipher.

7. The storwarding the originals of all messages not transmitted by mail to the Dead Letter Office, and the delivery of all messages received through a recording instrument, with the copy thereof, if any is made.

8. Such other provisions as are from time to time required to carry out the objects of the act and to perfect the system.

Third—That the lines shall be extended and new wires added as the wants of the community may require, and if the contractor fail to erect such lines and wires, the Postmaster-General may do it, and charge the cost thereof to the company, and deduct such amount from the payments due it.

Fourth—That the Postmaster-General may, from time to time, reduce the rates, provided the profits of the contracting party are not thereby reduced below ten per cent. per annum.

Fifth—That the company chartered by the bill shall make a contract, if required by the Postmaster-General, on the terms above named, provided no other company will do it for a less sum.

It grants no exclusive privileges in telegraphing, either to the department or to the company that may be employed to transmit messages. Other companies, if they transmit messages more promptly or correctly at the cheaper rates, or more fatefully, will perform the business. It involves no expenditure of money on the part the of the Government in constructing and operating or purchasing lines, while the rates proposed as the highest are as low in proportion to distance or transmission as those proposed by the advocates of a line to be built and operated by the Government.

I have the honor to submit herewith an amended draft of the act to incorporate the United States Postal Telegraph Company, and establish a telegraph system, and close a copy of a letter received by me from Mr. GARDINER G. HUBBARD, showing the European and American systems of telegraph. I cannot close this communication without acknowledging the obligations I am under to Mr. HUBBARD for his valuable aid in collecting information and his assistance in preparing this special report. I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ALEX. W. RANDALL, Postmaster-General.

Hon. SCHUYLER COLFAX, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Police Trials.

Commissioner MANSFIELD presided at the trials of policemen for violation of rules of discipline, &c., at Headquarters, yesterday. Mr. MANSFIELD said that he was gratified to find that the complaints for talking too long with citizens were lessening in number. The Commissioners were determined to break it up. If any man persisted in the habit, others would be found to take their places. A sharp thief will watch the habits of a patrolman, and finding it the officer's custom to meet his "side partner" at the end of his beat, will watch his opportunity to remove his booty while the pleasant chat is going on; and sometimes thieves have a confederate to detain an officer by conversation, while they are carrying on their depredations. The trials yesterday will probably result in the dismissal of several officers.

TOO SLOW.

Officers DAVID COTTRELL and JOHN F. BALLETT, of the Forty-seventh (Brooklyn) Precinct, were charged with neglect of duty, in not making proper efforts to arrest A burglar when requested by a citizen to go into a building where burglars were at the time at work. Mr. D. F. BALSTON testified that at about 7 o'clock P. M. his attention was called to a building, on Noble-street, by a window being stoved which he had fastened up with a stick an hour previous, and by hearing a noise inside. He told Officer COTTRELL, who directed him to the Station-house. When near the Station-house BALSTON met Officers O'BRIEN and BALLETT and requested them to go to the building, and started to accompany them. BALLETT said to BALSTON, "You had better go to the Station-house and notify the Captain." After going a block and a half BALSTON followed this advice and saw Capt. SERRIES. Roundsman DEGNAN and other officers were at once dispatched to the building. The Roundsman made his entrance through a window and searched three stories of it before he saw anything of BALLETT. COTTRELL'S excuse for not going to the house was that he understood the citizen to refer to a previous burglary, and simply desired to have the place watched. BALLETT said that his delay was occasioned by running for and speaking to COTTRELL, whom he was to relieve. Commissioner MANSFIELD seemed to think it a very poor piece of work on the part of both the accused, as the Roundsman, who was notified of the occurrence subsequently to the officers, entered the building first.

The trials hereafter will take place, as before stated, on Wednesday and Fridays, commencing at 9 A. M.

POLICE COURTS.

THE TOMBS—DOWLING, JUSTICE.

LARCENY OF A GOLD PIN.

The St. Bernard Hotel, situate on the corner of Mercer-street and Prince, is rapidly adding to its very bad reputation, in consequence of the misconduct of those who frequent its portals. If the Police are to be credited, this hotel is the constant resort for the worst class of thieves and desperadoes in the City. Pistols are often freely used within its walls, several robberies have been committed near its doors, and the neighborhood has positively become a most dangerous locality for the peaceable pedestrian as he passes the intersection of these two streets. Late on Thursday evening Mr. JAMES WETHERBEE, residing in Seventy-ninth-street, near Eighth-avenue, was passing down Prince-street, he was suddenly assaulted by the notorious WESLEY ALLEN, alias "Wess," alias "Patch" ALLEN, who came out of the hotel with a gang of confederates. The unfortunate gentleman soon found himself in the hands of the "mob," who took from his person a gold watch, valued at $12, and $12 in money. He communicated the facts to the Police at the Central Office, as soon as he was abandoned by the thieves, and Detective IRVING proceeded to arrest WESLEY ALLEN on a charge of committing the larceny. The prisoner was yesterday arraigned before the Magistrate, who committed him for trial at the Special Sessions. The complainant demanded protection, as he had been threatened by ALLEN'S friends, so the Magistrate sent him to the House of Detention.

ASSAULT WITH A PISTOL.

THOMAS JEFFERSON MITCHELL, of No. 116 Baxter-street, caused the arrest of THOMAS T. EVANS, because he had discharged a pistol at him, though the bullet did not strike his person. The prisoner was held for trial.

ESSEX MARKET—SHANDLEY, JUSTICE.

ALLEGED LARCENY.

Yesterday afternoon JOHN W. DAVIS, of Jersey City, made a small purchase and, as he states, went away leaving his pocket-book containing $38 on the stand of ISAAC COHEN, corner of Grand and Essex streets. Immediately on discovering his loss he returned and demanded his pocket-book, but COHEN professed to have no knowledge of it. Upon the complaint of DAVIS, a warrant was issued for COHEN, and he being arrested gave bail in $500 to answer.

JEFFERSON MARKET—DODGE, JUSTICE.

FALSE PRETENCES.

Some days since an affidavit was submitted on behalf of BRITTON & Co., No 70 Front-street, in which it is alleged that in June last it was represented to the firm that GEORGE R. MANN, of No. 29 East Fourteenth-street, was a man of respectability and large means, and the owner of a quantity of carpets and furniture in the hotel of which he was proprietor. In consequence of these statements the firm gave him credit for liquors to the amount of $1,700, not a dollar of which it is alleged has been paid. Upon this complaint a warrant was issued, and MANN was yesterday arrested. Upon being arraigned he stated that all the averments of the complaint were untrue, and gave bail in the sum of $3,000 for his appearance.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

ARREST OF BURGLARS.—As the morning train from New-Haven arrived at the depot in this City on Thursday, Officers MCDONALD and MCGOWAN, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct, saw two men carrying away a heavy trunk. As they acted in so doing in a suspicious manner the officers attempted to detain them for the purpose of examination. Only one of the men suffered himself to be arrested, as the other ran off. The one taken into custody was escorted to the Station-house, where it gave the name of JAMES MCVEY, and said the trunk found in his possession was found to contain about $400 worth of cloths, velvets and fancy goods he was detained. MCVEY then confessed that he and his accomplices had committed a burglary in the village of Westville, New-Haven County, Conn., where they entered the store of F. D. BRADLEY. The detectives succeeded in obtaining such a description of one of the confederates that they arrested FRANCIS CARNILAN on his arrival on the afternoon train from New-Haven. Mr. BRADLEY, having received a telegram from Capt. SPENDER, also arrived in the City by that train with the stolen property, and he fully identified the goods found in the trunk as his property. The prisoners have been sent back to Connecticut for trial.

GENERAL THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.—From the annual catalogue of the General Theological Seminary it appears that the total number of students for the year is 68. Of these the Diocese of New-York furnishes 38; Western New-York, 4; New-Jersey and Pennsylvania, each, 3; Rhode Island, Maine North Carolina, Pittsburg and New-Hampshire, each, 2; Maryland, Connecticut, Georgia, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Montreal, Colorado, Texas and Louisiana, each, 1. The whole number of the Alumni is 687, of whom there are deceased 119. The whole number of students matriculated since 1823 is 977. Prior to that date about 30 had been admitted without matriculation. Total, 997. At the last meeting of the Standing Committee, Rev. SAMUEL R. JOHNSON, D. D., Professor of Systematic Divinity and Dogmatic Theology, sent in his resignation, to take effect as soon as his successor can be appointed. Application is to be made to the present Legislature for the passage of a law enabling the Seminary to confer honorary degrees in theology.

THE GREAT FAR WEST.—A series of stereoscopic views of points of interest on the line of the Pacific Railroad will be exhibited this Saturday evening at Dodworth Hall, No. 806 Broadway, and will be explained by Mr. B. KIMBLE BROWN. Among the views of special interest are Granite Canyon, Camel Rock, Sherman Rock, Devil's Gate, Laramie and Echo Cities, Church Buttes, and the Valley of Bitter Creek. A series of views of some of the finest groups of statuary now existing will also be exhibited, and Miss Clara Louise Kellogg will sing a selection of ballads. On Sunday evening a series of views of a sacred character will be given, comprising the Cities of Jernsalem and Damascus and other localities in the Holy Land.

SUDDEN DEATHS.—JOHN ALLEN died suddenly yesterday morning at No. 13 Market-street, from unknown causes....PATRICK BILLY, a native of Ireland, also died suddenly yesterday morning at his residence in One Hundred and Twenty-ninth-street, between Eleventh and Twelfth avenues....LORENZO MEYE, a native of Germany, aged 55, died suddenly at his residence in rear of No. 114 Third-street.... PHILIP CHRISTION, aged 7 years, also died suddenly at No. 26 Second-avenue. Coroner SCHERMER will hold inquests in all these cases.

POLITICAL.—The German Republican Association of the Fourteenth Assembly District met at Meridian Hall, No. 128 Avenue A, on Thursday evening, and elected the following officers: President, Benedict A. Angermann; First Vice-President, Martin Oscar; Second Vice-President, Martin Schoeniben; Secretaries, Otto Ebbinghaus, Julius von Briesen; Doorkeeper, Charles Yung; Delegates—August Thum, Louis Fromme, Dr. George Schwartzenberg, Benedict A. Angermann, George Hey.

EPISCOPAL SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.—An Episcopal Sunday School Convention is to be held in Grace Chapel, opposite the Academy of Music, beginning on the evening of Sunday, the 17th inst., when Rev. H. E. MONTGOMERY, D. D., will deliver the opening address. The sessions of the Convention will thereafter be held every evening at 7:30 o'clock.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT.—ROSE LAMAN, aged 60, and an inmate of the Westchester County House, corner of Broome-street and the Bowery, was yesterday knocked down and severely injured by a New-Haven Railroad freight car, as she attempted to cross the track at Forty-seventh-street and Fourth-avenue. The injured lady was removed to St. Luke's Hospital.

LECTURES BEFORE THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—Rev. Mr. BOARDMAN, of Auburn, N. Y., preaches in the course under the direction of the Young Men's Christian Association, in the church on Fifth-avenue, corner of Twenty-ninth-street, tomorrow evening. Subject—"Universal Lay Agency the Law of the Church, and papers to said Justice in the presence and at the request of R. C. Thayer, attorney of the plaintiff, and that said Justice then received said papers on said motion.

DUDLEY FIELD.
Sworn to before me this 19th day of August, 1868.
DAVID R. CRONIN,
Notary Public, New-York.

City and County of New-York, ss.—R. C. Thayer, being duly sworn, deposes and says: That he has read the above affidavit of Dudley Field, and knows the contents thereof, and that the same is true to his knowledge.
R. C. THAYER.
Sworn before me this 18th day of August, 1868.
HORACE ANDREWS,
Commissioner of Deeds.

After reading these affidavits Mr. Thayer stated that Judge BARNARD retained all the papers contained in the printed record until the 3d day of August, 1868, on which day the Judge made an order vesting the property to James E. Hays, son-in-law of Mr. Duff, the Receiver, for the sum of $16,000 per annum, for the term of three years, without security, thus disregarding the several offers of Barney Williams and William B. Sinn, who each offered $28,000 per annum for the property with security, and also the offer of Mr. Hess, who offered $22,000 with security. This order of Judge Barnard was settled without notice to the appellants' attorney, and the lease was executed by John A. Duff, the receiver to James E. Hays, the son-in-law, at the Court-house, and not recorded in the Hall of Records within an hour and forty minutes from the time the decision was rendered. In this way the plaintiff was prevented from getting a stay of the execution of the case on appeal.

Mr. Hall claimed that inasmuch as the other side had made a motion for a resettlement of the order granted on the 3d of August, the Judge having denied the motion, these offers ought not to be considered as a part of the appeal papers.

Mr. THAYER said that inasmuch as it appeared by the admission of Judge BARNARD, and the affidavits read, that he had actually received the offers, it was the duty of that Judge to have considered them, and to give them such weight as they were entitled to. That it appeared by the Judge's opinion, written on the decision of this motion, that he had actually received these papers. This also appears from the following language, which is contained in the opinion, to wit:

"Since this motion was argued and submit ed, a variety of offers, coupled with conditions, of which I have no judicial knowledge, have been sent to me by the plaintiff, but as they are irregular, I only consider the question as it reached me on the argument."

At this stage of the proceeding the hour of adjournment having arrived, the further hearing was postponed until next morning. On the opening of the Court the next day, a majority of the Court, consisting of Presiding Judge Clerke and Judge Sutherland, decided that they would hear the appeal upon all the papers as they were printed in the case.

First, On the ground that they were printed from exemplified copies of the papers used on the motion at Special Term. That the Court did not feel at liberty to rely upon the memory of any of its brother members, when that memory conflicted with the record as certified to the Court. They must be governed by the record.

Secondly, The Judge at Special Term (BARNARD) having actually received the papers, we think it was his duty to have considered them, and hence that they are properly in the case.

Whereupon Judge Barnard stated he represented the minority of the Court, and he dissented from the judgment of the Court. In a related manner he said he would not hear the argument on appeal. It was accordingly arranged by the Court that another should sit in the place of Judge Barnard upon the argument of the case.

For the plaintiff and appellant, Mr. R. C. Thayer; for the defendants and respondents, Messrs. A. J. Vanderpool and A. Oakey Hall, the Mayor.

DOES THE SALE OF A STOCK AND GOOD WILL CARRY WITH IT THE RIGHT TO USE THE NAME?

Fredricks vs. O'Neil.—This was an appeal from an injunction granted by Judge SUTHERLAND, of this Court, restraining the defendant from putting up, keeping or maintaining, or in any way issuing as an advertisement, the name of Fredricks & Co. The appellant claimed the right to use the name of Fredricks & Co. as a trade mark, having purchased the stock and good-will from the retiring partner, L. D. Fredricks. The evidence showed that L. D. Fredricks had at the time the right to use the name of Fredricks & Co. only under a license granted to him by his brother, Charles D. Fredricks, who supplied the necessary capital and material for the plaintiff, (who was not a professional photographer) to enter into the business, with the express stipulation that the name of Fredricks & Co. should not be used, or be allowed by him to be used by others after he should have ceased his connection with the business. The appellant claimed that in purchasing the stock and good-will, he also acquired the right to use the name of Fredricks & Co.

The plaintiff and respondent argued: First—That the mere sale of the good-will of a business does not involve the right to use the name, (at least in this State,) on account of our statute against the use of fictitious names. Second—That trade marks may be lost by acquiescence. In such case the acquiescence must be of such a kind as to amount to a license—or even then, however, the license may be withdrawn, and further use under such circumstances will not be allowed. Third—Fraud is not an essential element in the case, so an injunction will be granted, though the manufactured article be equal to the genuine. Fourth—The principle is not confined to manufacturers, and it may be extended not only to the profits of trade, or manufacturing, but to the means by which profit may be made—for example, of omnibuses and signs.

The Court rendered a decision sustaining the injunction.

THE MERCHANTS' UNION EXPRESS—INJUNCTION MODIFIED.

James W. Blatchford vs. Elmore P. Rose, President et al.—On motion of Chas. A. Rapallo, of counsel for defendants, the order of injunction made in this action by me on the 7th of January, 1869, is so far modified as not to interrupt the carrying on of the express business now being transacted by the American Merchants' Union Express Company, or to prevent that Company from using in said business, property actually transferred and delivered to it by the Merchants' Union Express Company, before the service of said order of injunction.
(Signed) D. P. INGRAHAM, Justice.
Dated JAN. 8, 1869.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM—JAN. 8.

Before Judge Barbour.

Daniel C. Birdsall vs. John Livingston.—This was a motion to discharge an order of arrest, said order growing out of the following state of facts (some of which have been heretofore published): Gabriel Winter, for some thirty or forty years a well-known lawyer in this City, died, leaving some $200,000 worth of property, to which one, William Winter, and two children of defendant were the only heirs. William Winter was for years deemed idiotic, and subsequent to his father's death proceedings were instituted to have him declared insane, the result being a verdict in favor of his sound disposing mind. Winter then executed a deed of trust of his property to the plaintiff Birdsall, reserving the income of his estate to his own use during life—the remainder to his co-heirs, the children of the defendant. It subsequently came to the knowledge of the defendant, as it claimed by him, that though Winter's income was about $10,000 yearly, yet he was living at a cost of only about $800 or $1,000. Deeming it his right to see that this surplus, if not applied to Winter's maintenance, should be reserved for the heirs in remainder, he endeavored to persuade Winter to take proceedings for the care of this surplus, and in connection with such effort he (Livingston) wrote letters to Winter, which fell into the hands of plaintiff, Birdsall, and on which he brought three suits as libelous, and obtained an order of arrest, to discharge which the motion is made.

The motion was denied, made on the ground that the communications were privileged, and in the absence of proof of malice were not libelous, and that the defendant was privileged from arrest at the time it was made, he being in attendance at Court.

In opposition it is claimed that the communications were not privileged; that they were not only false, but maliciously made, and unnecessary for any purpose relating to the prosecution of Winter's interests. Num pous affidavits were read on behalf of the motion, tending to sustain the truth of the communications complained of. The Judge took the papers and reserved his decision. Ex-Judge Edmonds for motion; Daniel C. Birdsall, opposing.

William L. Gerhardt vs. Louisa Gerhardt; report confirmed and judgment of divorce granted in favor of the defendant against the plaintiff.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Justice Bedford.

There were twenty cases on the calender this morning. As on the preceding day, the Court was densely crowded.

FELONIOUS ASSAULT AND BATTERY.

John McCormick, a fashionably attired youth, was indicted for discharging a loaded pistol at Police Officer Hendry. The prisoner put in a plea of assault with intent to do bodily harm. The Court said there was no truth in the prisoner's statement. It was owing to a Providential escape that the complainant was not killed. If the prisoner had been tried and convicted of the major offence, the sentence would be ten years' imprisonment. However, as the District-Attorney had accepted the minor plea, the prisoner should be committed to the State Prison for four and a half years. The presiding Judge stated he would have made an example of the prisoner had he been found guilty of the felonious intent, not because he had any animosity toward him, but because on all proper occasions the Police should be protected. He therefore sentenced him to four and a half years' imprisonment.

AN EX CONVICT.

Ex-Judge Stewart moved that the Court accept bail for his client, Joseph Rotchild, who, with others not yet arrested, is accused of larceny. This having been the second indictment pending against the prisoner, Judge BEDFORD promptly refused to receive the motion, stating that he would never admit to bail an ex-convict under such circumstances.

BURGLARY.

Joe'ah Ward was charged with burglary. He pleaded not guilty. It appeared from the circumstances of the case that on the 31st of December, about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, he entered the dwelling-house of Terence Golden by breaking open the lock of a bedroom door. When discovered in the bedroom he had in his possession three coats, three pairs of pantaloons, three vests, some shirts and blankets, valued at $50. A middle-aged woman, named Bridget Golden, sister of the prosecutor, testified to having found the prisoner in her brother's bedroom, of which she was caretaker on the day in question. He had the articles above mentioned folded up. She told him she would have him arrested, whereupon he violently pushed her aside from the door, which she attempted to bolt, and slid down stairs along the banisters. He was subsequently arrested on the same day by Officer Nolan at the corner of Broome and Mott streets. The prisoner produced no testimony in his own behalf; but for the defence it was alleged by Mr. Levin, who appeared for him, that the prisoner had merely called at the house to inquire for a man named Thompson, and that coming to the complainant's door he found it open and entered, thinking his friend might possibly be there.

Judge BEDFORD, in charging the jury, said they were not to be guided by the assertions of counsel. He sentenced the accused to five years' imprisonment, after he had been found guilty by the jurors, who had not left their seats.

SNEAK THIEF.

Charles Forrest was arraigned on a charge of burglary in the third degree. It appeared that on the 11th of December he forcibly entered the house of a man named Thomas Fessenden, West Forty-fourth-street, and stole one coat, valued at $28. The prisoner consented to plead guilty, in the absence of his counsel, Mr. Spencer. Judge BEDFORD, in passing sentence, said the prisoner was an old offender; and that even had his counsel been present it might not, possibly, improve his condition. He was a young man, and he hoped the sentence of two and one-half years' imprisonment would deter him from committing criminal offences against the law.

There having been no other cases on the calendar for the day ready for trial, the Court adjourned until Monday next, at 11 A. M.

The Governor of Kentucky, in his annual message, presents the following exhibit of the State finances:

"The reports of the Auditor and Treasurer, which accompany this communication, will acquaint you with the financial condition of the Commonwealth: The public debt of the Commonwealth on the 10th of October, 1867, amounted to.... $4,611,109 46
Deducting the bonds consecrated to the School Fund, and not redeemable..... 1,032,797 46
Leaving the total indebtedness of the Commonwealth subject to payments upon the 10th October, 1867 $3,578,309 00
During the fiscal year ending 10th October, 1868, there was redeemed by the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund, State bonds amounting to..... $97,759 00
Amount of public debt on 10th October, '68 $3,580,554 00
Amount of State bonds redeemed from 11th October, 1868, to 31st December, 1868..... 80,000 00
Leaving the actual amount of State debt proper upon the 31st December, 1868..... $3,498,554 00

"In making my report to the Commonwealth at the last session of the Legislature, I ventured to express the opinion that the public debt would be completely wiped out in the year 1868. Had the Legislature at its last session been willing to have the Sinking Fund applied to the purchase of its own bonds, we have other resources of the sinking fund, consisting of bank stocks, railroad stocks, turnpike stocks, the annual rent of the Penitentiary, which, in value and discription, were set out so fully in my former message, as to require no further enumeration at this time. I am deeply impressed with the conviction that a wise and liberal policy alike demand the entire extinction of our State indebtedness at the earliest practicable moment.

Many of our bonds are not yet due. Some that have matured have not been presented. I recommend, however, that the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund be clothed with power and discretion to discharge and pay off any and all bonds that may be offered for redemption, irrespective of their maturity. I also recommend that power and authority be given to the Sinking Fund Commissioners to dispose of the turnpike and bank stocks belonging to the State, if necessary, to pay any of the outstanding State bonds which can be had."

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

The session of the Peace Conference will commence in Paris to-day, the request of the Sultan of Turkey, that it should be postponed a few days, not having been acceded to. The Sultan has, therefore, telegraphed his instructions to the Turkish Ambassador, who is to be his representative in the Conference. It is surmised that these instructions direct the withdrawal of the representative of Turkey from the Conference the moment the discussion goes beyond the Sublime Porte's recent offer of cession to Greece. The official newspaper printed at Constantinople says if the Turkish Ambassador does withdraw from the Conference, war with Greece is inevitable. The Greek representative is not to be allowed a voice in the Conference, but will attend to give information. Whatever the Conference agrees to, and is sanctioned by Turkey, must be accepted by Greece.

The amount of bullion in the vaults of the Bank of France was 27,000,000 francs less yesterday than at the corresponding period of the previous week.

It was reported in Paris last night that an insurrection had broken out in Milan, Italy.

CONGRESS.

During the morning hour in the Senate yesterday, a number of bills were introduced, and two were passed. One of these latter, makes a grant of land to aid in the construction of a military wagon road in Oregon. The bill for the relief of Mrs. Sue MURRAY, whose property was taken during the war by our troops, serving in Alabama, was taken up, Mr. HENDRICKS made an argument in favor of its passage. General debate on the bill followed, consuming the entire session, but without taking action upon it, the Senate adjourned to Monday next, when

The morning hour of Friday being set aside in the House for hearing reports of Committees on claims of a private character, several bills granting relief to various individuals for remedies assigned, were passed. A bill was reported from the Reconstruction Committee, and passed, relieving from their political disabilities R. W. BARR and S. F. PHILLIPS, officers of the Supreme Court of North Carolina. The Naval Appropriation bill was made the special order for Monday next. The House went into Committee on the Whole, on the bill making appropriations for the Military Academy, and was addressed by Mr. LOGAN, in opposition to Mr. JENCKES' Civil Service bill. Mr. JENCKES defended the measure. The Military Academy Appropriation bill, which appropriates $271,869 for the maintenance of the West Point Academy, was considered in Committee, and passed by the House. The House again went into Committee, and Mr. BOYER made a political speech in reply to one made some time since, by Mr. BLAINE, of Maine. At the close of his remarks, the Committee rose, and the House adjourned to Monday next.

GENERAL.

Captain-General DULCE, of Cuba, will issue to-day a proclamation granting amnesty to all political offenders, including those in prison, in exile and in hiding. He will speedily define the limits of the liberty of the Press, and it is said will permit the journals to discuss, without the intervention of a censor, all subjects except the questions of slavery and the Catholic religion.

An interesting case is at present before the Supreme Court General Term, in which Archbishop MCCLOSKEY and others are appellants, and the widow of FRANCIS M. LANGDON and others are respondents. LANGDON, a coal merchant of this City, died Nov. 1, 1865, leaving a wife, a mother and one brother,—the two last named residing at the time in Pennsylvania. Six days before his death he made his will, whereby he bequeathed his estate, valued at over $60,000, to Archbishop MCCLOSKEY and Bishop WOOD, of Philadelphia, for church purposes, excepting an annuity to his widow of $400 and one or two other small bequests. Surrogate TUCKER refused to admit this will to probate, on the ground that the deceased, at the time of the execution of the will, was not competent to make it. The appeal was taken from the decision of the Surrogate. The case is still in argument.

The Newport steamer Old Colony, when opposite Succession Rocks, in the Sound, about 6 o'clock on Thursday evening, ran into a schooner loaded with gravel, bound for this City. The bowsprit of the schooner was broken, and two of the crew in their fright leaped overboard and were drowned. The steamer lowered two boats, the first of which was swamped. The other took three men to the schooner, who succeeded in working her into Glen Cove.

EDWARD WHITFIELD, of the firm of MOORE & WHITFIELD, cotton factors in Memphis, Tenn., was killed by a gambler named S. A. DORAN, in that city, yesterday. The two had had several quarrels regarding property. It is said that WHITFIELD and his father had attempted to eject DORAN from a house which he rented from them, on account of his disreputable conduct. DORAN published a card in a Memphis paper yesterday, denouncing the WHITFIELDS as thieves, liars and poltroons.

The preliminary examination of persons concerned in the alleged husband-poisoning case at Lacons, N. H., closed on Thursday. Mrs. FARRAR, the wife, and Miss ABBA MOULTON, of Lowell, Mass., were both bound over for trial to the March term of the Supreme Judicial Court. Miss MOULTON procured bail, and Mrs. FARRAR did not and was committed to jail. Dr. T. S. FESSEN was discharged.

Mr. ALVIN COSGROVE, of Evansburg, Crawford County, Penn., was run over on the Pennsylvania Central Railroad, at Harrisburg, before light yesterday morning, and killed. He was on his way to Vineland, N. J., to recruit his health, and had left the cars to escort some traveling companions, who were to remain at Harrisburg, to a hotel near the depot. He was killed by a shifting engine. He was an old and estimable citizen of Crawford County, and leaves a large family.

The eight persons who were killed in Rochester, N. Y., a day or two since by the giving way of a floor in a school-room, were buried yesterday. There was but one funeral service, and that was held at the Catholic Church to which the school was attached. Fifty persons in all were injured. The Coroner's inquest established the fact that the accident was in consequence of an undersized cap having been placed upon the column supporting the floor.

A dispatch from Augusta, Me., says that it is now conceded that Hon. HANNIBAL HAMLIN was the choice of the Republican caucus for United States Senator, and that he will receive the unanimous support of the Republican members of the Legislature on Tuesday next.

The negro difficulties in Princess Anne County, Va., have come to an end, and the military force sent to the assistance of the Sheriff has returned to Norfolk.

The Workingwomen's Association met last night at No. 8 Cooper Institute. Interesting addresses were made by Miss SUSAN B. ANTHONY, Miss EMMELINE L. ROSE, Miss SHIRLEY DARE, Mrs. Dr. HALLOCK, Mrs. NORTON and others. Committees were appointed to procure an incorporation for the Association, and to solicit the aid of popular lecturers. Delegates were also appointed to the Female Suffrage Convention to be held in Washington on the 19th inst.

A meeting was held at the Cooper Institute last evening for the purpose of expressing sympathy with the cause of Greece. WM. CULLEN BRYANT presided and made an address. He was followed by Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER, Rev. Dr. BELLOWS, Rev. Dr. CHEEVER and Gen. WOODFORD. Resolutions expressing sympathy with the suffering Cretans were adopted.

The Standing Committee of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Pennsylvania, at a meeting in Philadelphia on Thursday night, refused by a unanimous vote to sign testimonials for Rev. Dr. DOANE, recently elected Bishop of the new Diocese of Albany, New-York.

Rev. Mr. SUTPHEN lectured at Olivet Chapel, last evening, on "A Trip to the Rocky Mountains."

The Workingmen's Union met last evening and reelected Mr. W. J. JARVIS as President of the Union.

Cotton was very freely dealt in yesterday at an advance of fully a cent ℔ lb. Breadstuffs were in light demand though weak and drooping in prices. Hog products were quoted higher, and were in fair request. Meat other articles steady, with little animation. Freights inactive and irregular.

The Burden of Unequal Taxation—Mr. Wells' Report.

The student of political economy has a melancholy satisfaction in seeing the principles of his science demonstrated by yearly losses from his own pockets and those of his neighbors. For some years this journal has attempted to show to its readers and to Congress, that the present system of national taxation and the irredeemable currency were together destroying the profits of industry. When Mr. Commissioner WELLS' first reports to Congress upon taxation appeared, we hailed them as a national benefit, proving, by statistics collated from a wide field of investigation and most clearly presented, what we had been urging both as a matter of practical experience and as the result of science,—the inequality, burden and loss attending our present financial system. Though Mr. WELLS' reports were prepared with such care, and though attracting the attention of economists the world over, Congress, in general, treated them and the more popular presentations in the Press with profound indifference. Each member felt that he knew by intuition all that Mr. WELLS had gained by hard study, and we doubt if the majority of the two Houses ever even read those able and most thorough documents.

Both at that time and since, we have pressed upon the attention of Congress that, under the guise of protecting individual interests, the scheme of taxation was in fact impoverishing the country, and so diminishing productiveness that it really protected the foreign not the native producer.

The present report of Mr. WELLS, which ought to be read by every citizen of the country, is a demonstration of the position we have so often urged. The facts are unassailable, being carefully gathered from the whole country, and show that the laboring and middle classes have been growing poorer under the present tariff and revenue system.

Thus the increase in the price of groceries and provisions in 1867, as compared with 1860–61, is 88 per cent.; of domestic dry goods and clothing, 86½ per cent.; of fuel, 57 per cent.; of house rent, 65 per cent.; and in the large cities the latter has increased from 90 to 100 per cent. In the first half of 1868 the average increase of all the elements which constitute the food, clothing and shelter of a family, has been 79 per cent., as compared with 1860–61. Against this the rise of wages in 1867 has been only 50 per cent. for unskilled labor, and 60 per cent. for skilled mechanical labor. Making a careful comparison of the expenses of laboring men in different manufacturing establishments through the country, it appears that in 1860–61, the weekly wages were $6 04 and the expenditures $5 52, leaving a saving of 52 cents a week; in 1867-68 the wages were $9 54, and the expenses for the same articles $9 54, showing the unskilled workman this year to be $27 worse off at the end than under gold wages, and without the taxation. If flour be taken as a standard, the average increase of price from 1860 to July 1, 1868, is 90 per cent., while the average increase of wages is 58 per cent.; so that in this item the workman is worse off by at least 20 per cent. this year than he was before the war.

Without examining further Mr. WELLS' interesting tables of expenses and wages, we note especially the broad fact that all household expenses have risen seventy-nine per cent since 1860. In other words, the person whose annual income and expenditure before the war were $1,000—say the country clergyman, or city clerk, or teacher—finds now that his expenses for precisely the same objects are $1,790. If his salary had been raised to the gold standard—say $1,350—he is still some $400 behind annually, or so much poorer. Even in gold, his income is worth $440 less annually. Each individual with fixed income has 79 per cent. less to spend. His dollar is only worth a fraction of what it was. If he has the same income in gold, his dollar will now buy 44 per cent. less.

If he is a laborer, earning before the war ten dollars a week in gold, and consuming it all, he now receives but $15 80, while his necessary expenses are 90 per cent. greater.

It is manifest that an increase of personal and household expenses like this must be eating out the means of the nation. Every man, woman and child feels the inequalities and burdens of our present system. Prices of commodities are far beyond gold values, and their former range before the war. The consumers are proportionately poorer. The producers—with the exception of speculators and here and there exchangers—are growing poorer. Our manufacturers are being driven out from foreign markets, because their expenses are so much heavier than those of foreign producers.

One of the most striking instances of the inequalities which are burdening the people, is furnished by the lumber tax. Every inhabitant of the country is interested in having cheap lumber. A tax on lumber enters into the rent of every building. We imported, in 1868, about seven and a half millions of rough lumber. Our domestic product is valued at fifty-four millions.

A tax of 25 per cent. on foreign lumber is of course a tax on all domestic lumber of the same amount. Thus in order to favor an interest which is already prosperous, and to obtain a tax of $2,250,000 for the Treasury, the nation taxes itself $16,000,000, and this tax enters into the daily expenses of every person in the United States, for on rents depend almost all prices. What more convincing instance could be given of the mode in which expenses have risen 79 per cent. to each individual since 1860, and of the burdens laid on the whole people?

The United States Senator.

The contest for State Senator at Albany is becoming warm. Senator MORGAN has left Washington and gone to conduct his canvass in person; Gov. FENTON, who is his leading opponent, is also on the ground;—and the third candidate has not yet turned up, though it is said on the one side to be MARSHALL O. ROBERTS, of this City, and on the other to be Judge NOAH DAVIS, of Western New-York.

It seems to be quite generally conceded on all hands that money will decide the contest,—in other words, that when the lines are fairly drawn, so as to determine the strength which each can count upon, the one who buys the most votes from the opposition, will carry the day. This is not the view of the case which we should be most eager to flaunt in the faces of the corrupt monarchies of Europe, though the fact, that it is the one most widely taken here, by the men most familiar practically with such contests, gives it a melancholy interest. Of course, political schemes and combinations will be resorted to first; when they fail, the cash value of votes will become a matter of calculation.

We have heard that there is a very strong political combination, with its headquarters here, the pivot being the Custom-house, in favor of MORGAN'S reelection. Only one or two of the "points" have been developed as yet. MORGAN reflected is to secure SEWARD'S confirmation as Minister to Russia, and the Collectorship thus vacated is to go to Mr. C. A. DANA, whose retention of office under GRANT is taken for granted. It is said that quite a large number of persons now in Federal office, rely upon carrying this project into effect as a means of enlisting very strong influences in favor of their own retention.

Gov. FENTON relies, we believe, on the support he promises to applicants for office, rather than on those he has made and kept in the past, for the purely political support which is to help him to the Senate. The Governor believes that political gratitude is a "lively sense of favors to come," rather than of favors already done. He is rich in this coin, at least, and has had abundant experience in its use.

The chances on the whole seem to us in favor of Gov. MORGAN'S reflection. As a practical business man, he has been sagacious, energetic and successful. His knowledge of the business wants of the country, though respectable, scarcely rises to statesmanship. His personal character is good, his social position excellent; and his determination to be reelected unquestionable. In those qualities which used to be considered desirable in the Senate,—eloquence and practical statesmanship,—he is not superior to either of the other three; but those qualities have gone out of fashion and practically count for nothing in contests for a seat in the Senate. ROBERTS would be a useful member in many of the practical details of business. He is genial, popular and quite as rich and as generous as MORGAN. Intellectually, DAVIS is undoubtedly the foremost of the candidates; but there seems to be an impression that Mr. CONKLING supplies everything, in that direction, that could be made useful.

It looks as if MORGAN'S chance was the best; but if ROBERTS goes into the contest zealously he may improve FENTON'S prospects of an election, if not secure his own.

The Paris Conference.

The Conference to be held at Paris on the Eastern question commences its sessions today, it appears, all previous reports to the contrary notwithstanding. The request of the Turkish Government for postponement, in order that time should be given for forwarding instructions to the Turkish representative, has not been complied with, and DERVIEH PASHA has accordingly been instructed by telegraph from Constantinople. The latest intelligence by the Cable is to the effect that Turkey will assuredly decline to negotiate on any other basis than that laid down in her ultimatum to Greece, and that if her demands on this point are not acceded to, she will at once withdraw from the Conference, in which case, according to the official La Turquie, war between Turkey and Greece would be inevitable.

This is not a promising beginning for the negotiations of the Conference. We presume that the demand for delay made by Turkey was rejected by the full vote of the Conference, or at all events with the assent of the majority of the Powers represented. France and England, as well as Russia and Prussia, must have been parties to the determination, and judging from this preliminary step, it would seem as if the assembled diplomatists at the Paris Conference were bent upon bringing matters to a settlement, one way or the other, as soon as the forms and etiquette of their proceedings may permit. And they are unquestionably right in so doing. If war is to come, it may as well come now as six months hence, and the longer that negotiations are pending, the greater the danger of the Great Powers being implicated. If hostilities break out now between Turkey and Greece, there is some possibility of their being confined within their original limits, but if negotiations on such delicate questions are prolonged, there is far greater danger of latent ill-feeling between the Powers interested being developed, and of a European war resulting from what is in its primary form merely a dispute on a question of international law between two second or third rate Powers. We do not suppose that any one of the Great Powers concerned can actually want war at the present moment. Whatever may be the ultimate desires and ambition of Russia, she is not prepared for war, she has no breech-loaders and few iron-clads. France can scarcely wish to be needlessly involved in a quarrel so far from home, while a formidable foe stands ready to challenge her military supremacy on her own frontier. Austria cannot really wish to jeopardize her future, and forfeit all the benefits which tranquillity and progress have conferred upon her, by precipitating a war which must in almost any event prove disastrous to her—certainly in finances, if in nothing else. England, of course, will not fight unless absolutely compelled, and will probably assent to anything that France does. But there are still many elements of danger in the situation. It may be that an excess of fanatical fatalism will impel the Turks to face the danger of being driven out of Europe, rather than yield one iota to the hated Greeks, and it is possible the restless ambition of the latter may urge them to risk all in an appeal to arms. In any case the Conference has a delicate task before it, and we are inclined to think its members have been wise in refusing to entertain propositions involving delay. Diplomatic relations having once been broken off between the two original parties to the quarrel, delay can only tend to intensify the bitterness of feeling between them, while prolonged negotiations may at any moment develop the antagonism of interests between Russia and the Western Powers into a serious dispute. Prompt diplomatic action, on the other hand, may effect a pacific solution of the difficulty. We can scarcely believe in the permanence of any settlement thus arrived at, but anything is better than the anxiety and suspense of long-drawn-out negotiations, far more likely to result in fresh misunderstandings than to heal the old ones.

The President's Pardon.

A good deal of indignation has been excited in certain quarters by the President's recent proclamation of pardon and amnesty to persons engaged in the rebellion. He has been loudly denounced for having usurped power which belongs only to Congress, and a resolution has already been passed in one branch, calling on him for the authority under which he claims the right to issue such a proclamation.

We presume the President will cite, for the information of Congress, the following section of a law enacted by Congress in 1862, and signed by President LINCOLN on the 17th of July in that year:

"SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, that the President is hereby authorized, at any time hereafter, by proclamation, to extend to persons who may have participated in the existing rebellion in any State or part thereof, pardon and amnesty, with such exceptions and at such time and on such conditions as he may deem expedient for the public welfare."

It is possible that this law, or this section of it, may have been repealed. But if so, Congress does not seem to have been aware of the fact, or even that any such law had ever been enacted.

It cannot, of course, be expected that the public at large should remember all the laws that Congress may have passed; but it does not seem unreasonable to look for a better memory on the part of the members of Congress as to action which they themselves have taken. Unless the law referred to has been repealed, the section quoted would seem to be conclusive as to the power of the President to issue just such a proclamation as the one in question.

Who Wants to be Protected?

Our late fever for buying the world has changed to a mania for "protecting" it. We are asked to "establish protectorates" in Mexico, in the West Indies, in the Dominion of Canada,—here, there, and everywhere. We are to act the part of Big Brother to the universe. We are to keep an eye on all the Little Brothers and Sisters, take them under our wing, espouse their quarrels, "lick" their assailants, "treat" them with our pocket-money, and bring them up generally in the way they should go. That is the "mission" of the United States, according to the latest expounders and apostles of "manifest destiny."

Here is a Chicago gentleman, for example, one Mr. MEDILL, pointing out to Gen. RAWLINS that Canada is a clear case of an unprotected female, whom common gallantry requires us to take care of. Here is the belligerent BUTLER, asking belligerent rights for the Cuban insurgents, and so paving the way for a "protectorate" there. Here is Mexico reading a "menace" of protection in Gen. ROSECRANS' address, and Lower California, Sinaloa, and Chihuahua, at least, almost sure to be gathered, ere long, under our protecting pinions. Here is the Foreign Affairs' Committee of Congress considering an elaborate proposition to "establish United States Protectorates over each of the islands in the Caribbean Sea." Nay, here are advocates of a Protectorate even for Crete—thus demonstrating that we are not expected to confine our protecting disposition to the Western Hemisphere, but to let it extend all over the globe.

Now, what with Canada, and Cuba, and Chihuahua, and California, and Crete, and the Caribbees, haven't we about enough schemes not "protection" on hand,—or perhaps some enterprising Congressman would be good enough to suggest another?

As a somewhat trivial matter, we would like to inquire, meanwhile, how many of these and other spots on the earth's surface have asked our protection, and next, how many of those that have asked, need it;—inasmuch as protection, like most other things, does not come cheap, and we are pretty sure to pay roundly for exercising the privilege. Let us at least take these schemes up one at a time, so as to have a breathing-spell. Who is the first candidate for protection?

The Cause of the Cuban Secessionists.

The address of Gen. DULCE on taking office at Havana on Jan. 6, will be more effective than the troops of LERSUNDI have hitherto been in putting down the rebellion in the eastern half of Cuba, provided the Cubans are a reasonable race. He promises them all the reforms they require; announces that the freedom of the Press, the right of public meeting and representation in the Spanish Cortes are granted; and declares that Cuba shall henceforth be a constitutional Province of Spain, rather than a mere dependency, without acknowledged rights or actual representation. In the conduct of the rebellion in Cuba these are the only conditions which have been openly demanded by the Cubans; to all appearance they have now gained what they say they are fighting for, and ought to be satisfied to lay down their arms.

But the Cubans are not more reasonable rebels than were our own five or six years ago. The vital question there at this time, as it was in the South then, hidden there as it was here under much talk of liberty and independence, is that of slavery. The Cuban rebels are building on the same foundation as did the Southern people, though the former have not so openly declared as the latter did that slavery is to be the corner-stone of the structure they propose. It is the maintenance of slavery for which the Cuban revolutionists are laboring and fighting most zealously, but most insanely, for their persistence in the struggle, more than anything else, will precipitate the sudden abolition of slavery, which they most fear. An effort has lately been made by the Cubans to arouse the western half of the island to insurrection, and in an address of the revolutionary Junta to their western brethren this purpose is revealed. The language of the address forcibly reminds one of the Southern style of official proclamations and newspaper editorials during the war. Spain is pictured by the Junta as the North was by the rebel Press of 1862-3 as urging and plotting servile insurrection by "class armaments," and is charged with making "soldiers even of the criminals of the jails, prisons and workhouses." Spain is announced as having declared "a war of extermination," and to have resolved that "Cuba shall be Africanized rather than cease to be Spanish." Of the intentions of the Cubans themselves, it is said by the Junta that they "will not accept slavery as a necessary inheritance of the past, but instead of abolishing the institution as a means to sink the island into barbarism, as is threatened by the Spanish Government, the Association will look to abolition as a means to ameliorate the moral and material condition of the laborer, and to place upon a basis more equitable, and therefore more secure, the property and wealth of the people."

This plan of gradual emancipation Spain will doubtless be glad to adopt, and we would rather trust its execution to her than to the Cuban slaveholders themselves. But Cuba's claims to separate independence no Administration in Spain can allow, either as a measure of justice or a matter of necessity. The loss of Cuba would revolutionize as well as bankrupt Spain. Hence the promptitude with which troops were lately dispatched to Cuba; hence the prompt issue of Gen. DULCE'S generous proclamation; and if these measures do not avail Spain will doubtless finally resort to the abolition of slavery as a means of quelling the rebellion. The sudden liberation of the immense number of slaves of Cuba—largely in excess of the free population—would, under the present unsettled state of affairs, destroy all industrial and social organizations. The parallel between the South and Cuba would end with the publication of such proclamation of freedom in Cuba. As the relative numbers of the slaves and planters there are just the reverse of what they were in the South, the consequences of abolition in the two countries would be diametrically opposite, and instead of the comparative quiet which reigns in the South we should probably witness in Cuba the repetition of the terrible scenes of conflict between the races which occurred in Hayti when the French National Convention of 1791 most generously but most impractically proclaimed freedom there. The present system of labor in Cuba, based though it undoubtedly is on the wrongs of the black race, is its only source of wealth, and this system cannot be suddenly disturbed during a time of war without the most disastrous results.

The Paraguayan Settlement.

The Paraguayan business, trivial as it was, was a very ugly one; and we shall all be justified for drawing a breath of satisfaction at the news that it is over. Possibly the Paris-Paraguayan news is to be taken with a grain of allowance. An envoy sent to accomplish a specific act is pardonable for representing that the arrangement he has been able to effect is entirely satisfactory; and it is the practice of diplomatists to make that representation.

However, there is no reason to doubt that the statement received by the cable is correct, and that the result was "eminently satisfactory," consisting of "full atonement for the recent outrages to the American flag." Gen. MCMAHON is an officer who would not be likely to take anything less; his instructions are understood to have been clear, definite and peremptory; and last, but not least, Gen. LOPEZ will probably prove to us a man of his word—fox, headstrong and ambitious as the Dictator is, he understands as well as another the importance of keeping faith, in an exigency like his, with a powerful foreign Power.

Reparation by force would, of course, have been easy to secure. But it would have been a costly affair, with nothing but the soothing of wounded national honor to compensate us. We have nothing to gain from exhausted Paraguay. Stripped and trained like a gladiator, that country is simply an armed camp, and it is a work of no inconsiderable difficulty, even with powerful armies and navies, as Brazil has found, to do it injury. Our State Department has handsomely solved the difficulty, it is to be hoped, and has vindicated the honor of the country without, as usually happens in such quarrels involving punctilio, disbursing some millions of dollars and many lives in the attempt. We have at least not made an Abyssinian affair of it, as we might easily have done by a little lack of skill,—and that is always something gained.

MINOR TOPICS.

The cable says that the Paris Conference on the Turkish question will certainly open to-day. We hope they will not only be able to agree upon a plan for maintaining the peace, but that it will be as favorable as possible to the "Giaours" of Crete. The members of the Conference will have the satisfaction, this afternoon, of reading about the great demonstration in New-York City last night in favor of the Cretans.

In the death of JOHN MINOR BOTTS, Virginia and the South have lost a faithful and brave man, who stood true to his country and to the Union in the days of trouble. Since the close of the war Mr. BOTTS has belonged to the extremely Radical school of politicians, and both the views he held and the policy he advocated were of the most uncompromising character—not a whit behind those of the late THADDEUS STEVENS, of Pennsylvania. But the country will not forget how he stood by the Union in the time of trial and danger, nor how he stood by GRANT when he had but little support among the white population of Virginia.

In the death of Gen. ROUSSEAU, the country loses another of the brave and true loyalists of the South, who will be forever honored in the history of the war for the Union. At the very opening of the secession troubles, Gen. ROUSSEAU, along with a few other prominent Kentuckians, declared boldly for the Union, and entered the field for its defence. From the time of the establishment of "Camp Rousseau" and his first efforts in raising troops, down through all the campaigns in the southwest till the close of the war, Gen. ROUSSEAU was among the most gallant and heroic soldiers that fought under the American flag. At the close of the war he served in Congress, where he took the Democratic side in politics, and latterly has been in command in the State of Louisiana, where he had work which was at once the most difficult and brought him the least credit.

With the growing ease in the Money line, there was a further development yesterday of the activity in the Public Funds, as also in Railway and Miscellaneous share property both at and outside of the Stock Boards at firmer and rising prices. The Government houses reported a vigorous movement in the several issues of the national bonds, both register and coupon, chiefly on investment account,—the market closing with an upward tendency. The investment demand is making a more perceptible impression on the floating supply each successive day, and will probably strengthen values materially within the current month. The original Five-Twenties attracted more attention late in the afternoon, and were not easily procured at the going rates. Gold was firm. Exchange steady.

It will be seen that Mr. LOGAN, of Illinois, yesterday addressed the House in opposition to the Civil Service bill of Mr. JENCKES.

The proposition that has been made in Philadelphia for the appointment of a murder detective might very well be carried out in New-York. More than half of the persons who commit the known murders in this City escape detection altogether; and there is no doubt that very many murders are committed every year which are never known to the public. Ordinary detectives do not like working up this class of cases, unless there be a large reward in prospect. As the Philadelphia Press says: "Detectives do not fancy giving time to murder cases when other things pay better, and in all administrations within our knowledge they have been stirred to energy, as a general thing, and not stepped forth willingly to unravel a murder case." It is our own opinion that the appointment of a special officer, whose duty shall be the investigation of murder cases, would advance the ends of justice, aid in the suppression of crime, and increase the safety of the community.

Has not the case of JOHN H. SURRATT been sufficiently botched already, without the lawyers making a further display of their incompetency? They had a case of something at the start. But they made it a case of the wrong thing in their first indictment, repeated the blunder in their second, and are now trying to reiterate it in a third, where the gravamen of the charge is that SURRATT was engaged in the rebellion and fled from justice. And what about the Amnesty? It is about time to let JOHN SURRATT alone.

The business of constructing a canal across the Isthmus of Darien, is now on the tapis. The question occurs: Will not a marine railway, by which vessels of the largest size and tonnage of our commercial steam marine may be taken quickly from one ocean to the other, better accomodate the commerce of the world? That this is practicable and feasible is a foregone conclusion, and it will cost less than a canal and locks of adequate dimensions. This statement is made at present, simply to arrest attention and consideration before the manner and character of the enterprise is fully established.

The Provision trade at the Produce Exchange has been mainly speculative for some time past, and the operators for a rise in hog products have met with unlooked for success, aided by the "short crop" reports, which have been quite industriously circulated, doubtless with a view to the inflation of values.

It seems that the protest of the Press and the public against the proposition to increase the pay of the Police is participated in by the Police Commissioners. They believe that the members of the force might serve the ends of their appointment better by remaining here and performing their duty, than by crowding to Albany to influence legislation in behalf of their unreasonable project. An order has been issued disapproving and forbidding meetings of the force at headquarters on the pay question, and objecting to the levying of subscriptions, to be used in so questionable a manner at Albany. This order checks the movement effectually,—at least for this season.

There was a very marked rally in cotton yesterday, on an unusually active business, establishing an improvement of about a cent a pound on the favorite grades. The dealings, which exceeded 10,000 bales all told, were well distributed—spinners, shippers and speculators having made free purchases. The heaviest operations were on speculative account, the aggregate of these having been more than fifty per cent. of the grand total transactions. Middling Uplands closed at 28 cents, as against 27 cents a pound on Thursday.

We spoke yesterday, for the hundredth time, of the necessity of altering the law in regard to legislative bribery, so that the party giving information of the crime shall not be liable to punishment equally with the offender whose conviction he may secure. We learn from our Albany correspondent that Mr. HALE of the State Senate, is about to bring forward a bill for amending the bribery and corruption laws, which will embrace the principle we have so frequently advocated. It will embrace the anti-bribery provisions contained in the Constitution drawn up last year, the chief features of which are that it relieves from prosecution, civil or criminal, the person offering the bribe, provided (and not otherwise) the bribe be accepted by the person to whom it is offered, and allows either party arraigned for accepting or offering a bribe to testify in his own behalf. We have no idea that this will put an end to legislative bribery and corruption, but it will assuredly be a check upon it, and will often be the agency of its exposure and repression.

The New-England reformers are now taking up the question of the wrongs of labor and the growing degradation of the working classes. We have received a circular of the "New-England Labor Reform Convention" calling a Convention on the 27th instant, which will be held for two days, and will continue through six sessions, day and evening. In their circular, they say that the American people are now "interrogated by an issue" which more than any other, perhaps more than all others, involves in its solution, the welfare and destiny of human society—the Labor question. They say that the rule of right in regard to labor is practically nullified,—that the laboring classes are the poorer classes, and wealth centralizes into the hands of a few; and they also believe that the charges which working people bring against society are mainly well founded,—that the aristocracy of mere wealth is a fraudulent usurpation, subversive of free institutions, and hostile to the best interests of the whole people. We agree with the "New-England reformers" as to the overwhelming importance of this question, especially in great cities like New-York; and if they can make any practical and feasible suggestions in the way of putting a stop to the growing degradation of the working classes, and their elevation as men, laborers, and citizens, we shall gladly give them our support.

The new Captain-General of Cuba, in his proclamation to the Cubans, tells them that they have been granted "freedom of the Press, the right of public meeting and representation in the national Cortes, the three fundamental principles of true liberty." In grandiloquent language Gen. DULCE says: "To the citizen shall be returned his rights, to man his dignity!" These must be wonderful words to the Cubans, though of course they do not apply to the seven hundred thousand black slaves on the island. We hope that in this matter Gen. DULCE will be liberal, and will recommend to the Cortes such measures as will result in ameliorating the condition of the unutterably degraded and wretched African population.

The United States lead the world in the manufacture of first-class fire-arms—a fact which the public is apt to lose sight of in consequence of the immense puffery of the Prussian needle gun and the French Chassepot rifle. It is, however, susceptible of proof that the Remington, Peabody, Winchester, Spencer, Colt and Sharpe gun factories are constantly engaged in supplying European Governments. One manufacturing firm has just delivered 40,000 rifles to the Danish Government and 30,000 to the Swedish, having still a contract on hand to furnish 15,000 of the same sort to the Greeks. Another firm has just delivered 20,000 rifles to the Cuban Government, to be used against the insurrectionists, while still another has contracted to make 30,000 breech-loaders for the Russians. The demand for the improved American fire-arm is constantly increasing.

The Old French "Encyclopedie"—Interesting Letter of Baron Steuben.

The following letter may interest many of our readers, as a contribution to the history of the Baron STEUBEN. It is addressed, as will be seen, to the Century Club, of this City, by Mr. SAMUEL B. RUGGLES, in presenting to that association a full copy, in thirty-nine volumes, once belonging to the Baron STEUBEN, of the French Encyclopedie, nicknamed in Europe the "padding-stick," in stirring up the French Revolution:

NEW-YORK, Dec. 5, 1868.

To the Board of Management of "The Century":

It having been decided this evening by your authority, to appropriate $1,200 to commence the formation of a "Library of Art and Literature," for the permanent use of "The Century," I respectfully ask leave to present to you for the library, a copy of the "Encyclopedie ou Dictionnaire Raisonné des Sciences, des Arts, et des Métiers," so notorious in literary and political history for its influence in hastening the revolutions in France and other European nations, in the eighteenth century.

The publication of this celebrated work was commenced in 1780, but, being repeatedly checked by the Government of France for its political and religious tendencies, was not fully completed until after the outbreak of the American Revolution. The present copy is the fourth edition, republished in thirty-six volumes of text and three of plates, at Geneva, in 1777 to 1779, in

THE ROADSIDE MURDER.

Reported Capture of the Murderer in Canada—A Party Sent out to Identify Him.

From Our Own Correspondent.

POKE JERVIS, Friday, Jan. 8, 1869.

The "roadside murderer," JEREMIAH SMITH, has been reported captured so many times that people are slow to believe anything they may see published in regard to his whereabouts. Sometimes we hear of his wandering from town to town in the guise of a merchant, next among the pines of Michigan, again arrested and discharged for want of evidence, and now he brings up in Canada West, where there is but little doubt he is in the hands of the officers of the law, and will in due time receive the punishment for his crimes he so justly merits.

I learn from Mr. A. B. LONER, a citizen of Wurtsboro, near which place SMITH resided, that on Tuesday, the 5th instant, a letter was received by the District-Attorney of Ulster County, from the Chief of Police of Hamilton, Canada West, that a man bearing the description given of SMITH, had been arrested at that place, and was held in custody to await identification. The man arrested refuses to answer any questions, or to give any information in regard to himself whatever, being perfectly non-committal. A photograph of the prisoner accompanied the letter to the District Attorney, and yesterday the Sheriff proceeded to Wurtsboro, and on showing the photograph to a number of the citizens who were intimate with SMITH, one of whom was LE GRAND MORRIS, in whose house the murderer lived, they each pronounced it to be the veritable SMITH. The Sheriff star ed yesterday, with four or five citizens of Wurtsboro, for Hamilton, to prove the identity of the murderer, and take measures to have him brought to the States. I give the facts as they are related to me by a reliable and trustworthy person, and have no hesitancy in presenting them to the public. The rewards which were offered for the arrest of SMITH amount to $3,000.

OBITUARY.

John Minor Botts.

JOHN MINOR BOTTS died yesterday morning at his home in Culpepper, Va. His death was not unexpected, as he had long been in failing health.

Mr. BOTTS was a man of considerable note in the political history of this country. He was born in Virginia, in the town of Dumfries, Prince William County, on the 16th of September, 1802. Soon after his birth his parents removed to Fredericksburg, and from thence to Richmond, where they perished in the great theatre fire in 1811. Young BOTTS received a good school education and a good hunting-up, notwithstanding the loss of his parents during his youth, and so thorough a preparation for the law, which was the profession of his choice, that he was admitted to the bar at the age of nineteen. After he had practiced steadily for about six years he retired to a farm in Henrico County and established himself as a Virginia country gentleman. He did not long remain in quiet, however, for in 1833 he was elected to represent his county in the Legislature of the State. He at once took a prominent position among the leading members of this body and soon became one of the most active politicians in Virginia, working with the Whig Party. He was several times reelected to the Legislature. In 1839 he was elected to Congress, and there stood earnestly and ably by HENRY CLAY, zealously advocating most of the points of the great leader's programme—a National Bank, a protective tariff and the distribution among the States of the proceeds of the public lands. After serving two terms he was defeated by Mr. SHEGOG, but in 1847 succeeded in gaining a reelection.

Mr. BOTTS was long a warm and intimate friend of Gen. TYLER, but he at once abandoned him on his (TYLER'S) accession from the Whig Party, and in the Presidential election of 1844 he supported Mr. CLAY. After the death of Mr. CLAY and the dissolution of the Whig Party, he became a member of the American Party. He opposed the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and sympathized with those Southern members of Congress who opposed the passage of the Locompton bill in 1858. In 1859 a feeble attempt was made to place his name before the people as the Know-Nothing candidate for the Presidency, but it did not attract favorable attention.

Mr. BOTTS resumed the practice of law in Richmond in 1859 and continued until the opening of the rebellion. During the war he professed adherence to the Union, and was, for the greater part of the time, permitted to live unmolested by the rebel authorities. He was, however, subjected to a great deal of trial and inconvenience. One night in March, 1862, a squad of a hundred men, under the rebel Gen. WISE, came to his house, took him from his bed, and carried him to prison, where he was held in solitary confinement for eight weeks. His arrest was caused by the suspicion that he was writing a secret history of the rebellion. Search was made for the manuscript, but nothing was found. After his release he went to Culpepper, and purchased the farm on which he lived until his death. Here he was continually persecuted by the rebel forces. His farm, too, was repeatedly overrun by both armies, and dug over, time and again, for military operations.

When the war had closed Mr. BOTTS again took a deep interest in political matters. He labored earnestly for the early restoration of his State to the Union, but without success. He was a delegate to the National Convention of Southern Loyalists in Philadelphia in 1866, and in 1867 signed his name on the bail bonds of JEFFERSON DAVIS. Since that time his energies have practically given way. He declared his intention to take the stump, during the last canvass, for GEN. GRANT, but was unable to do so, or take any active part in the contest, on account of his failing health.

The funeral of Mr. BOTTS will take place in Richmond on Sunday.

Major-Gen. Roussean.

A New-Orleans dispatch, published yesterday morning, announced that Major-Gen. LOVELL H. ROUSSEAU, commander of the Department of the Gulf, was lying at the point of death, his disease being a sudden attack of inflammation of the bowels. A dispatch received yesterday announced his death, after three days' illness. Gen. ROUSSEAU was born in Lincoln County, Ky., in August, 1818, and resided with his family in that vicinity for several years. His advantages for obtaining an education were quite limited, yet he applied himself so thoroughly to his studies that in 1841, when he removed to Indiana, he was enabled to enter upon the practice of the law. He took an active part also in local politics and was elected to the Legislature, where he served three successive terms. On the breaking out of the Mexican war he joined the army, receiving a Captain's commission. He participated in several engagements during that war, but bore no conspicuous part. On his return in 1850 he located in Louisville, Ky., and resumed the practice of his profession. A political life, however, was congenial to him, and he was chosen to represent his district in the State Legislature. In 1861, when the storm of secession broke upon the country, he labored assiduously to prevent his native State from joining the rebellion. One of the most memorable speeches made in those exciting days was delivered by Senator ROUSSEAU from his place in the Senate. That speech, denouncing the secessionists by whom he was surrounded, attracted the attention of the whole country, and placed him in the front rank of the defenders of the Union. When he saw that actual hostilities could not be averted, he resigned his position in the Senate and at once commenced the organization of troops for the Union army. Recruiting for the rebellion was going on actively all around him, and to such an extent did Kentuckian sympathize with the rebel movement, that a man who actively supported the Government was in hourly peril. Gen. ROUSSEAU was eventually obliged to establish his camp on the Indiana side of the river, and he was notified that the marching of his regiment through the City of Louisville would be the signal for a rising of the rebels and the extermination of Union men. Nevertheless, when his regiment was equipped, he did march to Louisville and established his headquarters there, amid a storm of indignation. But without encountering armed opposition. His bold and determined action at this time served, more than any other one thing, to prevent the secession of Kentucky. He continued for some time to organize Union battalions, and to prevent armed rebels going South. He was at length ordered to join in the field the forces he had organized, and, as their commander, did gallant service with the armies of the South and Southwest. He participated in nearly all the principal engagements which occurred in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia. He was early made a Brigadier-General, and for his bravery and gallant services at Perryville received a Major-General's commission. He was engaged in the campaign and battle of Shiloh; was Commandant of the District of Northern Alabama, commanding Gen. GRANT'S Microscopic in command of the Third Division of BUELL'S army, and pursued Bragg through Kentucky, and fought him hand-to-hand at Perryville. He was engaged in Stone River, and in the campaign of Tullahoma, Chickamauga and Chattanooga. During 1864 he commanded of the District of Tennessee; made his famous raid into Alabama, destroying the Montgomery and Atlanta lines of railroad, and in December, 1864, held the important position of Fort Rosecrans, Nashville, against the siege of Hood. In 1865 he was elected as a Union man to the House of Representatives, where he acted with the Democrats. During the session he had a personal encounter with Mr. GRINNELL, of Iowa, for which he received the censure of the House. He immediately resigned, but was again returned by his constituents. In 1867 he was appointed a Brigadier-General in the regular army, and was dispatched to take possession, in the name of the United States, of Alaska. He was summoned to Washington to testify in the impeachment trial, but did not arrive in time. Not desiring to return to his command in Alaska, the President assigned him to the new command of the Gulf Department, where his administration has been more quiet and peaceful than was that of any of his predecessors.

NEW-YORK

Financial Condition of the State—Annual Report of Comptroller Allen.

The annual report of W. F. ALLEN, Comptroller of the State, presents a favorable view of the State finances. He gives the following statement of the public debt:

On the 30th of September, 1867, the total funded debt was $48,307,662, classified as follows:

General fund debt	$6,642,023
Contingent	130,000
Canal	15,733,000
Bounty	26,802,000
Total	$48,307,662

The amount of the State debt on the 30th of September, 1868, after deducting the unapplied balances of the sinking funds at that date was:

	Debt on the 30th Sept. 1868.	Balance of Sinking Funds on 30th Sept., 1868.	Balance of Debt after applying Sinking Funds.
General fund	$4,707,662	$123,178	$4,584,487
Contingent	68,000	15,517	52,483
Canal	14,340,000	4,017,922	10,322,078
Bounty	25,045,000	1,616,400	24,004,600
Total	$44,160,662	$5,774,017	$38,964,445

The aggregate debt of the State was reduced during the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1868, by the sum of $3,356,995, and if the unapplied balances of the sinking funds be deducted, the debt will be reduced from the amount as it stood on the 30th of September, 1867, with the like deductions as of that date, by the sum of $8,280,143.

GENERAL FUND DEBT.

The principal of the general fund debt is payable as follows:

On demand	$28,462
1870	700,000
1873	800,000
1874	800,000
At pleasure	2,393,023
Paying interest	$4,681,523
Not paying interest	15,500
Total	$4,707,023

This debt has been diminished during the year by the sum of $954,795. Up to the present time but $650,000 has been contributed, in any one year, from the surplus revenues of the canals to the sinking fund created for the payment of this debt. By section one of article seven of the constitution the surplus revenues of the canals, after paying expenses to the amount of $1,700,000 in each fiscal year, after June 1, 1855, was set apart as a sinking fund to pay the interest and redeem the principal of the "canal debt of 1846," until the same shall be fully paid. By section two of the same article it was provided that when a sufficient sum should have been "appropriated and set apart" under the first section to pay the interest and extinguish the entire principal of such canal debt, the sum of $1,600,000 of the surplus revenues of the canals shall be set apart, in each fiscal year, as a sinking fund to pay the interest and reduce the principal of the "General Fund Debt." The commissioners of the Canal Fund have been enabled to comply with the first section of the article, and have "set apart and appropriated" a sum sufficient to pay the interest and redeem the entire principal of the canal debt of 1846, and the provision of the second section for the benefit of the General Fund Debt Sinking Fund is now fully operative, and henceforth the surplus revenues of the canals will contribute annually $1,600,000 to that sinking fund. This will provide a fund for the payment of the interest and redemption of the entire principal of the general fund debt by the close of the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1872.

GENERAL FUND DEBT SINKING FUND.

The following statement gives the receipts and payments on account of the General Fund Debt Sinking Fund for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1868:

Receipts.
Balance in the Treasury, Sept. 30, 1867	$923,126
Received from the Canal revenues	650,000
Transferred from the General Fund for interest	29,617
Total	$1,601,743
Payments.
Interest on General Fund Debt	$256,125
Indian annuities	7,128
Redemption of State stock 5 s, May, 1868	491,700
Redemption of State stock 5 s, May, 1868	627,261
Redemption of Comptroller's bond, 6 per cent, payable on demand	8,134—1,390,348
Deficiency Sept. 30, 1868	$188,625

The following table gives the several amounts chargeable on the General Fund Debt Sinking Fund to Oct. 1, 1868, and the means applicable to their payment:

Receipts.
Constitution from canal revenues	$650,000
Payments.
Deficiency Sept. 30, 1868	$188,625
Interest on debt	260,449
Indian annuities	7,201
Stock due and unredeemed	12,650— 468,925
To be provided for	$181,075

CANAL DEBT AND CANAL REVENUES.

During the fiscal year, the portion of the State debt has been reduced by the purchase and cancellation of canal stocks, by the sum of $1,453,100, and the amount of the debt outstanding on the 30th day of September, 1868, was $14,340,000, against $15,793,000 outstanding Sept. 30, 1867. This, however, includes the balance of the canal debt of 1846, outstanding, but for which provision has been made by revenues set apart and appropriated to its redemption, and which may be regarded as practically paid to the amount of $3,230,700. If the sinking fund, for the payment of this debt, and the unapplied balances of the sinking funds for the payment of other portions of the canal debt be deducted from the present apparent indebtedness, it will leave the debt to be provided for $10,322,707.

TAXATION.

There was received during the fiscal year on account of the general fund revenue:

From taxes	$9,025,243
From sale duties	52,330
From auction duties	137,701
Total	$9,244,970

The principal source of revenue for this fund being the taxes imposed upon the property of the State from year to year, and the principal expenditures for the support of the Government and all the ordinary appropriations made by the Legislature being paid from this fund, the question of taxation is one of immediate interest to all, and will be so long as the present rate of taxation, which may appropriately be said to be excessive, shall be necessary. The question of expenditure has also a special interest to the people. The increase of taxation for State and local purposes within the last twenty years has been such as to bring the subject home to every tax-payer. From 1845 to the present time the tax has increased from about two-thirds of one per cent upon the dollar, representing a tax of $4,170,824, to about 2 8-10 per cent in 1867, representing a tax of $46,615,921, and 2¼ per cent in 1868, representing a tax of $46,256,485. Neither the increased wealth of the State nor the necessities of the Government justify this increase in the burdens upon property. The assessed valuation of the real and personal property of the State is now not quite three times the valuation in 1845, while the tax is more than eleven times that of the latter year and the rate of taxation is more than quadrupled. Doubtless the assessed valuation is greatly less than the actual value of the property reached by the assessors, and some and perhaps large amounts of personal property escape taxation altogether, but the increase in taxation is none the less startling and the burden is none the less onerous. Estimated per capita the tax imposed under the State laws is more than $13 upon every man, woman and child in the State. In any consideration of this subject the taxes collected by the United States Government cannot be ignored. It is true that a large portion of the Federal taxation is indirect, and this portion of the tax falls upon all; from it none are exempt. In the language of Chief Justice CHASE, "No one who eats, drinks, wears or is sheltered under any roof, however humble, now escapes taxation." Without disparaging the wealth or the resources of the State, or the patriotism of its citizens, it cannot be denied that property is taxed, if not to its utmost capacity, at least more heavily than a wise and liberal Government ought unnecessarily burden it, and labor has nothing more to spare at the call of the tax-gatherer. The annual tax upon property, including State and Federal, now exceeds the limits which political economists assign as the average net profits upon its value. If State taxation is now unequal, and the burdens of the State are not equitably distributed among those who should bear them, it is the proper function of the Legislature to remedy the evil.

PUBLIC EXPENDITURES.

The debt of the State once paid, if the public expenditures can be kept within proper bounds, taxation for State purposes will be very light. That there is a fearful want of economy in almost every department will hardly be denied by any one who has watched the rapid increase of every branch of expenditure. Retrenchment is doubtless a cure of the age, both in public and private. Circumstances have led to a wide laxness and almost wantonness in the use and disbursement of money. The people have thus far uncomplainingly submitted to a great abuse of trust in their talent and waste in the public funds, but whether this has arisen from ignorance of the facts or some other cause is not known. It is believed that the time is not far distant when the people will find it convenient and for their interest, if not a pressing necessity, to exact a much rigid economy on the part of their servants, and that the expenditures of the State might be greatly curtailed, and that without loss or injury to its service, since it is no secret.

TAXES.

The following tables show the amounts paid and received for the various purposes indicated, and the rate per dollar upon the valuation for the State tax in each of the years 1868 and 1869, and an estimate of the rate of taxation and of the amounts which will be required for the fiscal year commencing on the 1st of October, 1869. The estimate is upon the valuation of property for 1867, and the amount which will actually result from the rates named may vary somewhat from the amounts estimated, as the total valuation of the property for 1868 may be more or less than that of 1867. But whether the estimated taxation will suffice to answer the demands upon the Treasury will depend very much upon the action of the Legislature.

Charitable Bequests—Will of Hon. Ichabod Washburn.

The will of the late Deacon ICHABOD WASHBURN, which was filed in Worcester, Mass., on Wednesday, contains several munificent bequests. It gives 150 shares of the Washburn and Moen Wire Works to endow a memorial hospital mémoratory of the testator's two daughters. Five years after his death, if the assets exceed $100,000, the trustees, twelve in number, are to make the excess a fund for a dispensary; and if it does not reach that sum, the executors are to make up the deficit from the estates. At that period also the trustees are to set apart $50,000 as a real estate fund to build and repair a hospital, and the balance as a fund for interior hospital expenses. He bequeaths his estate on Summer-street, Worcester, as a home for aged women, reserving a life rent therein to his wife, with $25,000 for its maintenance. On his wife's death $20,000 is to be added to this fund, and 200 shares of the wire works, per value $20,000, one-half to be been absolutely, and the income of the remainder to be here during life, and all at her death to be delivered to the trustees of the home. Other bequests are: $10,000 to the testator's native town of Kingston, to establish a similar institution there; $20,000 to the Bangor (Me.) Theological Seminary, on condition that they raise a like sum within two years; the Mission Chapel on Summer-street, Worcester, to the Union Church, $20,000 for its support, and $5,000 for the industrial school connected therewith; $50,000 to the Worcester County Institute of Industrial Science, by the will, and $50,000 by a codicil. He bequeathed to the Children's Friend Society, of Worcester, $1,000; to the American Board of Foreign Missions, the American Bible Society, the American Tract Society, the American Missionary Association, and the American Seaman's Friend Society, $5,000 each. All the foregoing bequests are made free of revenue or other taxes, and the residue of the estate, after paying debts and private bequests, is to be divided pro rata among the six last-named associations. The executors are EMORY WASHBURN and P. L. MOEN.

PERSONAL.

Gov. CHAMBERLAIN, of Maine, was yesterday inaugurated Governor of that State for his third term. In consequence of his feeble health, his address to the Legislature was unusually brief.

Mrs. W. J. FLORENCE had a benefit at the Baltimore Theatre last night. So great was the rush for seats that many tickets were sold at a premium.

LUCIUS F. ROLFE, who was arrested on the charge of presenting a fraudulent claim against the Treasury Department, had a hearing yesterday before a United States Commissioner at Washington, and was honorably discharged.

Mr. GEORGE W. DEMERS, editor of the Albany Journal, is recovering from his severe sickness.

Among the prominent arrivals in the City yesterday, were the following: Hon. W. E. Chandler, of New-Hampshire; Hon. W. H. Herrick, of Oswego, and Hon. J. B. Moer, of Washington, who are at the Fifth-avenue Hotel. Hon. H. C. Lord, of Cincinnati; Gen. Slocum, of the U. S. Army; Hon. J. V. Selby, of Baltimore, and Hon. A. P. Balch, of New-Hampshire, who are at the St. Nicholas Hotel. Commander Vaughan, of the U. S. Navy; Hon. W. L. Horst, of Philadelphia, and Hon. J. R. Putnam, of Pittsburg, who are at the Metropolitan Hotel. Prof. McAlpine, of Stockbridge, who is at the Coleman House, and Gen. Van Valkenburg, of Albany, at the Astor House.

BRIEF NOTES.

The remains of Brevet Major-Gen. ALFRED GIBBS, U. S. A., who died in Leavenworth, Kansas, were received in Newport, R. I., and buried on Thursday.

There were 1,110 cases of small-pox in San Francisco during the six months ending on the 11th of December last; 300 were fatal. The proportion of cases to the whole population was 1 to 135.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MRS. M. G. BROWN'S

METAPHYSICAL DISCOVERY

is the only logical treatment extant for the cure as well as prevention of disease. It destroys the root of all disease, covers the mortal frame with living, sound flesh, which is the forerunner of pure rich blood.

TO PEOPLE IN SEARCH OF PURE, RICH BLOOD —WHERE TO FIND IT ONLY—in the use of the Metaphysical Discovery is sound, living flesh and pure rich blood to be obtained.

If you drop a gold dollar out of your pocket it is not here and there, it is in one place and one spot only. You may search a lifetime, but if you fail to discover the spot you will never find the dollar.

On the same principle there is but one law to secure rich, pure blood, and the demands of that law are met only in the preservation of the flesh. If the flesh is unsound, the blood must be impure; flesh and blood live in harmony, each other; if one is unsound, the other is impure. God has appointed to each their own natural food, and no other food will answer—each must have its own.

The Metaphysical Pamphlet explains this food, which please send for to No. 51 Bond-st.

There is no other law. You may search for pure, rich blood among all the Balms and Tonics of the age, such as Sarsaparilla, Preparations of Iron, Syrups, Bitters and the whole category of poisons, in which, together with going from clime to clime, millions are spent annually in search of pure, rich blood, but in vain. After all your seeking, you will be like the man who sought everywhere but the right place for the gold dollar; he sought, but found not. He had his pains for his labor.

Your loss is much greater. You have failed to find the pure blood, lost your time and your money; and, whether you are aware of it or not, you are constitutionally injured. All machinery is injured if not fitted according to its own laws.

The Metaphysical Discovery is a positive cure for Deafness, Blindness, Baldness, Catarrh, Noises in the Head, Discharges from the Ears, Rheumatism, &c. &c. Mrs. M. G. BROWN is the only consulting female, receive patients for treatment, daily, at her Rooms, No. 51 Bond-st., from 9 to 2, 3 to 6 and 7 to 9 P. M.

Courses of treatment from $5 to $50.

All who can assist in correcting will reap a rich reward by placing themselves under the special treatment of Mrs. M. G. BROWN.

Persons at a distance, or those who wish to procure the METAPHYSICAL DISCOVERY, can do so, at $2 per package, or six packages for $10.

Send for the Pamphlet, Mrs. M. G. BROWN'S METAPHYSICAL PAMPHLET of 48 pages, to No. 51 Bond-st., New-York.

CATARRH, BRONCHITIS, SCROFULAR PORTION DEFINED, BY DR. HINGE, Newcastle, Pa., Pittsburg, N. Y., hereby announced. That no other remedies have ever cured these diseases but his sovereign remedies and treatment. All other remedies are mere palliatives and Catarrhs. Any great medical work concedes that they possess no specific cure. His other remedies eradicate all liver, kidney, genital and bladder complaints, dyspepsia, constipation, piles, biliousness, rheumatism, epilepsia, ear eruptions and deafness, spermatorrhœa, skin and mercurial and other eruptive diseases. Medical consultations, 25 cents. Address, Dr. HINGE.

FINANCIAL.

THE INSURERS' INDEMNITY COMPANY

OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK.

This Company was chartered by the Legislature of the State of New-York, at its last session, with a capital of $600,000, with liberty to increase the same to $2,000,000. Its object is to afford to those holding policies of insurance, issued by Fire or Marine Insurance Companies, an additional security against any possible loss or damage. For a very small consideration the Company will guarantee to the holder of any policy it may approve the full payment of any loss insured against; under such policy, and will also afford information and assistance to persons desirous of obtaining insurance, and who may wish such additional guarantee.

The advantages which this Company offers to the business community, to persons holding real estate in trust, to corporations and others loaning money on Bond and Mortgage, and to all whose interest it is to have certain indemnity in case of loss, when it can be procured at a very trifling additional premium, are such that it is believed that the business of the Company will be very remunerative, and that an investment in its stock will be exceedingly safe and profitable.

Books of Subscription to the amount of $250,000 of the capital stock will be opened at the National Broadway Bank, on the 15th day of January, 1869.

Any further information which may be desired, in relation to the Company, may be obtained at the office of the Corporators, No. 117 Broadway, Room No. 23, between the hours of 12 M. and 3 o'clock P. M. each day.

IMPORTANT TO INVESTORS.

GEORGIA 7 PER CENT. BONDS.
ALABAMA 8 PER CENT. BONDS.

We offer for sale a limited amount of the above bonds at prices which yield a better interest than any security, equally safe, that is now offered on the market.

The debt of Alabama is less than $3,000,000
The debt of Georgia is less than 3,000,000

At present prices they pay as follows:

ALABAMA, 8 per cent. interest,
GEORGIA, 7½ per cent. interest.

The Georgia bonds are secured by a first mortgage on two railroads in that State, worth more than double the amount of the debt.

THE CRETAN STRUGGLE.

PUBLIC MEETING AT THE COOPER INSTITUTE.

Addresses by Wm. Cullen Bryant, Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, Rev. Dr. Crosby, Rev. Dr. Bellows and Stewart L. Woodford.

A public meeting was held last evening, at the Cooper Institute, for the purpose of expressing the sympathy of American citizens with the suffering Cretans. The large hall was not entirely filled, but the audience was highly intelligent, and in full accord with the sentiments expressed by the speakers. A great many ladies were present.

At 8 o'clock the Mayor, Mr. A. Oakey Hall, came forward and said, the Mayor of this City had been selected to call this meeting to order, undoubtedly because in his vast constituency it would be that there was not one who did not sympathize with the objects of this meeting. He heartily sympathized with it. Byron and Hazlitt, who wrote poetry about the Greeks, were dead; but there were two poets present ever ready to sing hymns to liberty. He nominated for Chairman the political economist and philosopher, as well as poet, William Cullen Bryant, and for Secretary, Henry T. Tuckerman, of whom he spoke in complimentary terms. These officers were elected by acclamation.

ADDRESS OF WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

Mr. William Cullen Bryant now came forward, and was received with great applause. He said:

We are assembled, my friends, for a merciful purpose. You will hear the claims of the Cretans to your sympathy and aid more ably presented than I could present them. Crete, as you know, is one of the finest islands in the Levant—twice as large, at least, as our Long Island, and inhabited by Greeks from the very earliest period of its history. In Crete appeared the earliest dawn of European civilization. Crete was the first of the Grecian communities to receive Christianity. Crete at an early period was long a republic, acknowledging the sovereignty of the people. It was famed for wise and just laws, and when the great lawgiver of Sparta was framing a code for his people he went to Crete as a learner and copied its statutes. While I mention these things, the thought, I have no doubt, arises in your minds that the people of this island, they to whom God gave it and who have always dwelt within it, have a right to say under what Government they will live. For two hundred years—two hundred this very year—they have been crushed under Mussulman despotism. In 1669 the fierce Ottoman invaded Crete from the Venetians after a war of twenty-five years. The Turkish power was then irresistible; it has since waned and become weak; the Greeks have everywhere multiplied, the Turks have diminished in number and lost their original energy in consequence of depopulating and enervating wrong, the fruit of their false social system. The Cretans have followed the advice of Cowper to the enslaved:

"Wait for the dawning of a brighter day,
And snap the chain the moment that you may."

They have risen to break the fetters so long impatiently worn, and God speed them in the attempt! When we threw off the British yoke we claimed the sympathy of the friends of liberty everywhere. If we deserved it then, the Cretans deserve it now by a tenfold title. It has been said that the Turks are merely encamped in Europe. They are encamped in Crete only to domineer over the true possessors of the isle, whom they have treated with every mark of scorn, and from whom they have wrung an enormous tribute. I know that reports have come to us from Constantinople that the Cretan warriors have surrendered to the Ottoman authorities. Do not believe it. They have not sent their sixty thousand women and children to Athens with a design to surrender a few weeks afterward. They sent them away that they might be safe from the brutalities of the Turks, while for themselves they prolonged the struggle till their liberties should be acknowledged by their oppressors. These reports are but the repetition of a tale which has more than once proved false. But even were they true, there are the 60,000 famished women and children at Athens whom we must succor. Even were they true, there is the wasted territory of Crete, blackened with fires, strewn with ruins, stricken with want and misery. Even if they were true, there is a Conference of the European Powers soon to assemble for the purpose of settling the Eastern question, and these Powers must be made to unmask, that the voice of the civilized world demands that Crete be freed from its hatred Turkish yoke. When these Powers, in 1830, arbitrarily assigned Crete to its Mussulman masters, they reserved the right to intervene in case of any outrage committed on the rights of humanity. The time to intervene has arrived, and the Powers must take away from Turkey the stain of the conscience of the civilized world by giving Yet what the Greek population, wherever it exists, most ardently desire is that the Governments of Western Europe would withhold their hands and leave them to drive out a race whom they still regard as invaders and usurpers. Meantime it well becomes us, who are the youngest daughter of European civilization, to stretch forth a helping hand to the eldest, now in her utmost need. It becomes a republic which in its infancy broke the yoke of an oppressive government to sympathize with a people engaged in throwing off a yoke infinitely more odious—the yoke of a semi-barbarous tribe, alien to them in origin, in language, in religion, practicing detested polygamy, and treating their Christian subjects as an inferior and accursed race. What we may do for the Cretans will be received with no lack of gratitude, and will be recorded to the honor of the American name in the pages of history which are yet to speak of the deliverance of Crete. When our present Minister to Greece, Mr. Tuckerman, arrived in Athens, 700 Cretan children, with the teachers came under the balcony of his hotel, and sang a hymn of gratitude. He had been the Secretary of a public meeting held a little more than two years ago in this City for the benefit of the Cretans; and the sympathy then shown, and the aid afforded, had relieved their sufferings, and encouraged the heroic secretaries of Cretan liberty.

TELEGRAMS.

Mr. Bryant now read the following dispatch:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.
I cannot leave. My heart is with you. God speed.
JOHN F. C. SHANKS.

Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby arose and said: A dispatch just received at Washington from the Cretan Provisional Government, says:

It is with great satisfaction that we hear that public opinion in the United States still expresses itself strongly in favor of the struggling Cretans, and that there is some hope of a speedy recognition of Crete as an independent State. Then generous measure on the part of such a nation will have great influence on the political generation of our island. The winter season has brought about a certain inkwardness in the operations of the war. We, nevertheless, have to meet immense difficulties, the Cretans have not and will not cease fighting for their liberty. One of our greatest drawbacks is the want of provisions and munitions of war. Although Greece, the vital friends of Christian civilization, and humanity throughout the world, have never ceased supporting the Cretan cause, the obstacles with which it is here had to contend are very great, and we appeal to the generous sentiments of the people who have always shown themselves the true friends of Cretan liberty.

Signed by the Provisional Government—A. J. Mavromichalis, M. P. Mikonoulis, P. Tsibodakis, P. Paschalidoka and K. Zymvrakis. Countersigned by the Chief Clerk, J. Zafomakis.

ADDRESS OF REV. DR. BELLOWS.

Rev. Dr. Henry W. Bellows was introduced and received with loud applause. He said that he was sorry that he could not report himself as having visited Crete during his travels abroad. He had, however, been in the vicinity of the island. In spite of what had been called his Hellenic Mayor and he called him excellent because he hoped he would prove so, [applause]—he feared that all the people of this City were not aroused in behalf of Crete. Out of Boston, where $80,000 was raised for the cause, he thought very little had been done toward aiding the cause. Crete, as they saw here on the map, looked a very little place and a long way off, yet she was nearer to us, really, now that New-Orleans was on the day of which this was the anniversary when the battle of New-Orleans was fought. [Applause.] They were aware that there had been much progress that all parts of the world were more near to each other than each other. Neglect to sympathize with other nations in distress was a crime. But it was not only because Crete represented a portion of the world on which the burning glass of deep interest was turned, and not only because of her historic ground, or on account of her noble and heroic struggle for liberty that she was entitled to our sympathy, but also because she was a representative of that debt of gratitude which we owed toward the venerable mother of civilization. It was for this that they were here to say that Crete should either be made independent or a part of that country (Greece) with which she was so much in affinity. It did not become Christian nations to stand unmoved and care not for the rest of the world. The cause of Crete, standing on the outposts of civilization as the representative of the whole Christian world, facing Eastern barbarism, was sacred to us as the cause of Christianity itself. Those who had not traveled in the Orient had but a slight notion of the abominable vices and oppressions that prevailed there. It made his blood boil to see the selfish indifference of France and Great Britain to the question which involved the future of the Christian Church, and of civilization. Their apathy was one of the most hateful exhibitions ever presented to the nations. [Applause.] Dr. Bellows dwelt upon the tyranny exercised on the banks of the Nile. It had filled him with dismay to see it. He told of the practices that he had seen in Egypt, and asked how much better it was in Turkey. That Turkish power had nothing but the passivity of the office, and worn out institutions of the East, but it was bolstered up and galvanized by jealousies among the great Powers. He wished Russia had the Bosphorus to-day. [applause.] for it had shown some of the vigor of civilization in freeing the serfs. Crete was near to the Holy Land. To free Crete would go a long way toward freeing Syria—once a land flowing with milk and honey, but now a howling wilderness. Although at a few missionary spots like Bayrout and Jerusalem, the fire of the Christian religion was kept burning to show how much better might be the condition of the land if western civilization were extended to it. He would not dwell upon the noble characteristics of the Greeks, but he wanted to remind them of the debt of gratitude which America owed to them. When he stood in Genoa, the birth-place of Columbus, he had asked himself where the old world would have been if the new world had not been discovered. If the tide of emigration had not flowed hither, probably it would have overflowed in the direction of Asia and Africa, and have done for them what it had done for America. For the benefits received from that emigration, and more to deserve its good opinion, it was a duty to succor its ancient mother, to the countries that had been first received of its civilizing influences. Mr. Bryant, who, he was happy to believe, was numbered well our foreign relations, and with the strictest care whose character he had never sympathized, was a statesman in whom he had very great confidence, and he felt the people might safely trust to all that it was the part of the Government to do in this matter. But the American people individually had notice to perform, and he was ready to do his part. It was for them to say whether the moral power of this people should be brought to bear on Congress to meet in Paris to consider the Cretan question.

He concluded by reading the following resolution:

Resolved, That the war now going on between the people of Crete and the Turks, from the relation it bears to the welfare of Christians throughout the East, and to the cause of Christian civilization, requires the struggle, so heroically maintained for seven years, to be crowned by the Christian powers, and that we, as citizens of the American people and the American civilization, instruct our representatives at home and abroad, as well as our representatives at Paris and Constantinople, to use all their influence to secure the independence of Crete.

ADDRESS OF REV. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Rev. Dr. Beecher was next called upon. He said: Palestine, Greece, and England had contributed to give the world its present civilization. Palestine had been the cradle of decadence. Some thought the time of English decadence had come. But he believed that they were all to undergo a regeneration. He believed that the Jews would return to Jerusalem and become a great people; that Greece would regain her pristine position, and that England would have a new growth in New-England and the United States. Our people were not aware how much progress had been made in Greece during the last forty years. The religious freedom and education were more advanced than in the United States. He spoke of Greece, because the cause of Crete was the cause of Greece. It was a grievous wrong for a Government to be imposed on a people that differed in race, religion and customs from its governors. Crete could not be governed thus. Dr. Crosby placed the cau e of the Cretans with vigor and eloquence, and concluded amid great applause.

ADDRESS OF REV. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher then came forward, and was received very warmly. He said he did not want to emphasize the importance of doing something political, and not merely exercising moral force in behalf of the Cretans. We were not part of the Convention called at Paris to interfere practically. There might come a time when it was deemed best to put forth the arm of war, but at present we could only properly exercise moral influence. The world was smaller than it used to be and the countries of it were nearer together. We did not care for the political aspects of the Eastern question in its effects upon the boundaries of European nations, but we wanted to put forth an influence in the cause of humanity. It was said that the Cretan rebellion languished, but it would not die. Crete was a school for heroes, and they were being tempered in the fire for the work they were yet to do. [Applause.] Some might say that we had enough to attend to at home, but though charity began at home it did not end there. Were we to wait till we had done everything for ourselves, and then take a long breath and look at the world? Was this in the spirit of the Apostle? The best way to take care of ourselves was to take care of others in all parts of the world. Some thought it all poetry and Quixotic to talk of Greece, her past and her present; but it was not. We could say to Greece that we sympathized with her and would succor her wounded while she stripped for the fight. If Greece had the money stolen from American Governments in a single year she would put her King in Byzantium in two months. [Great applause.] It was not Quixotic to talk of a resurrection for Greece. Louis Kossuth, a few years ago, passed through this country "scattering pearls"—he would not finish the quotation. He to-day was in Hungary and Hungary was reconstituted. So would Poland be. There were things as old as man based or failing were not men. [Applause.] Oppressive power all based. He called on them to hate the oppressive power of the Mussulman (not of the Turk who was a mere accident.) He would not say a word against the Turkish common people, for whom he hoped one day to plead, but as now organized the Turkish nation was a despotic power that should be put down. The christian principle was love with a codicil—"abhor that which is evil." He called on them to hate Turkish oppression. He said "clear the ring and let Greece have a fair fight." It might make some difference with the spindles of Manchester, but Manchester was not Jerusalem. [Applause.] It might make some difference with the Lord of Paris, but he was not the Lord God. [Great applause.] Nations had a right to their own autonomy. He owned himself outside of his family, and nations owned themselves. Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina might never asserted their independence by constitutional methods had they had the weight of a feather of grievance; but when they attempted to assert their individuality so promote oppression, and commune it, they must be put down. [Applause.] Crete had just cause for asserting her individuality against the oppression of the Turks, though the Cretans had made themselves dear to every lover of liberty everywhere. The love of liberty should be a sentiment, and not a selfishness. [Applause.] It was not enough for him that America was free, South America, Europe, and the whole world should be free. For us to assert the rights of the people there as the light of our liberty stream across the ocean, wake up hope in the nations, and be the guide of the nations that hope. America was the patron of liberty the world around. Crete was the drum that called Europe to battle, and when she sounded the advance the continent should respond. He appealed to them to stand by every people on the globe who were striving for a free home, free men. He left the Cretans at the door of the Christian feelings of the American people.

ADDRESS OF HON. S. L. WOODFORD.

Hon. Stewart L. Woodford made the last address. He said that at this late hour he should not impose upon their attention. The words that had been uttered had struck the key-note of the public sentiment on this subject. Two and a half years ago we had heard the news of a revolt in Crete, and still that noble people was struggling against the Ottoman power. He doubted if ever in history was exhibited such noble and self-sacrificing devotion as had been shown. Gen. Woodford dwelt upon the desolation and cruelty which the Turks had inflicted on the land of the Cretans. No war had ever been waged between Christians and Moslems in which more cruelty was practiced than by the Turks in this contest, and none in which women and men had shown such noble instances of self-sacrifice. America sent word to the Congress of Nations at Paris, if they would have peace, to have regard for for the peace and the struggles of other nations. The Holy Land was under the heel of the Turk. As they were Christian men he urged them to give their earnest sympathy to the struggling Cretans.

At the close of the address the resolution given above, and the following, which had been read each at the conclusion of some one of the preceding speeches, were unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That the immunity from dynastic complications, enjoyed by the United States, renders it as one the duties of our country to express her sympathy with nations and popular instances in behalf of the oppressed and in the interests of Christian civilization; and that, therefore, while we, as a Government, follow the parting advice of Washington, and avoid "entangling alliances" with foreign countries, we are bound as religious freemen to give of our substance and our moral encouragement to the Christians of the East, now struggling bravely in the island of Crete against the barbaric power of the Turks, and that we respectfully ask the Government of the United States to use its influence to put an end to the atrocious warfare now desolating Candia.

Resolved, That the deplorable condition of sixty thousand Cretan women and children, women and children, now in exile at Athens, while their husbands, fathers and brothers are heroically resisting the Turkish despots, who have outraged the Christian sentiment of the world by their barbarous treatment of captives taken in battle, justly demand the benevolent intervention of a prosperous and free people to alleviate their sufferings; and that we recommend our fellow-citizens to contribute to the fund now being raised for the relief of the Cretan fugitives, and that an executive committee be appointed to receive subscriptions.

Resolved, That we recognize in the present crisis of the conflict between Crete and Turkey the inevitable fortunate of the one and the effects of despotism on the other, in connection with the solemn admonition of the leading European Powers, a providential opportunity to express and vindicate American principles of faith and freedom in the East.

Thanks to Mr. Bryant for his resolutions having been announced by the Chairman, the meeting was adjourned.

A MURDERER'S CONFESSION.

Stephen Abbott Tells why he Killed A. M. Bronson—A Struggle for Life.

On Thursday last Stephen Abbott, who has been on trial in New-Haven for the murder of Apollos M. Bronson, made a confession, the material portions of which are the following:

He says he had agreed with Bronson to help to poison a man named Welton, and burn his barn, for which he had received money and a gun in advance. After they met in a barn at night when both were under the influence of liquor. Abbott says Bronson had a jug; it had liquor in it, and he was going off till for me to take up to Henry Welton. I told him that I would have no hand in it. He said I had got to, for I had took the gun to bind the bargain. I told him I would have no no ac part in anything further. He insisted upon it. I told him I would expose the whole plot when I went up to Waterville. He said: "D—n you, will you?" and clutched the ax that stood behind the door. He came towards me with the ax. There was a plank put up in the centre of the barn that McCook used to place out little slats for a fence. I dodged around that, and he struck at me, but when the ax came down I grabbed it by the handle, and I never let go of it again. We had quite a struggle for the mastership of the ax; I got the ax from him. He then got a strip of board, and struck at me with it. He hit me a blow at that at the time I was arrested my left arm, from the elbow to the shoulder, was black and blue. I struck him with the ax flat-ways, or I meant to do so. He fell upon his knees and grabbed me by the legs. We had a good tussle before I got free, but I still held on to the ax. I came upon my feet about the same time that he did. We were both down at that time. He grabbed me by the knees, and that put me over backward. I was hung to me like a tick. When I got liberated from him I hit him again. He dove into for me again, but I got out of his reach that time. I struck him again, and he lay senseless. I did not strike him more than three times. The last time I struck him I think I hit him in the back or side of the head. When he lay there and did not show fight, I went and took hold of him and lifted him up, and found he was dead. I had no idea of killing him. I went to the door, and I thought I would go and tell Mr. Hubbard what I had done. My courage failed me, or the devil put it in my head not to go. I went to the door, as I said, and the thought struck me that Mr. Once and his man would be there before I could get back from Mr. Hubbard's and get him around there. The thought struck me that I would hide him under the floor. I knew the plank would hold down loosely. The coats on him seem to have been made in the south by the axe, or the wabble of the axe, in striking him, or in some such way. I never used a knife on him. I put him under the floor. I lifted up the bed and put it up in the corner, on a chair. I picked up the boards we had taken from the floor and took him and carried him toward that point east of where they had oysters. I took the money out of his pockets. There was a ten dollar bill, a five, a two and some small currency—not over $20 in all. I took the body off toward the point, about two hundred rods. I had him down on the beach near daylight, I stripped off his clothes and stripped myself, and waded out where the water was three or four feet deep, on the flats, and gave him a shove from me in the direction of the Light-house. I saw him float some four or five rods from me, in a southeast direction. I then came back to the barn, and took the bloody clothes and ripped it open, and put in the feathers out on the floor of the barn. In our struggle, in running back and forth, we got the bed all blood. I took the tick and the other clothes and burned them on the same ground where Bronson had burned up the straw tick the Tuesday night before we went to New-Haven, to get rid of the bugs. I picked up the ashes and ground up the coals, so that it would burn more readily. I went into the barn then and looked for blood around on the floor. There were some spots of blood, and I took the axe and shaved them off and poured down some paint, and took some shavings and rubbed it around, to hide the marks of blood. I carried Bronson's watch over to Rosina Allen's, and gave it to Mrs. Allen. Her husband was digging potatoes. I went out to where he was and told him I had left the watch with Mrs. Allen. I had a conversation with him about it before. About 11 o'clock I came to town. I said around till it was time to be home 9 in the evening. I planned to have gone up on the 6 o'clock train, but I missed it. I took Bronson's coat and swapped it with a man in Lockwood's saloon. I went back and staid in Hinman's hay loft that night. I got up early the next morning and came over to New-Haven. I went home and dug potatoes, and worked for J. Thompson one or two days. They arrested me about 8 o'clock in the evening the next Friday.

THE EXPRESS ROBBERY.

Examination of the Alleged Robbers of the Merchants' Union Express Company.

The examination of Isaac Marsh alias Isaac S. Morton, and Charles Bullard alias Charles E. Thompson for the alleged robbery near Yonkers of a car belonging to the Merchants' Union Express Company was, after several adjournments because of the absence of Mr. William T. Howe, the counsel for the prisoners, this morning resumed before Justice Ferris in the Grand Jury Room in the Court-house at White Plains. Notwithstanding the absence of Mr. Howe on this occasion also the examination was proceeded with.

Before any witnesses were called, however, Morton, one of the prisoners, put in, on behalf of himself and Thompson, a protest against any further proceedings being had, which was entered upon the minutes of the Justice.

Foreman W. Brown, the messenger who had charge of the car at the time of the robbery, was then called to the stand, and being examined by District Attorney Dickman testified as follows:

I left Buffalo at 7 o'clock, on the morning of the 30th of April, 1868, in charge of an express car, owned by the Merchants' Union Express Company, attached to a New-York Central Express train. The witnesses, after giving a detailed account of the various sources from which he had received valuables, then proceeded as follows: I remember of having $12,000 when I left Albany at about ten o'clock on the night of the 30th of April; after the train had left Greenbush for New-York I made up my bed on the top of the safe and a packing trunk and lay down and went to sleep; I was awakened during the night, not far from Garrison's, I think, by a man holding my wrist with one hand and holding a revolver to my head with the other; he told me to keep quiet or he would blow my brains out, or something to that effect; I think I made some effort to get up; the next thing I remember is that he, with a companion, had me on the floor of the car; they then tried to handcuff me, with my hands behind me, and succeeded in doing it with my hands in front; I recognize in the prisoners the men who did this; they then took the key of the safe out of my pocket, next tied my feet together, then tied my hands and feet in a bunch, and then tied me to the stove; they then threw a buffalo robe over me to hinder me from seeing, and began to fumble with the safe, trying to unlock it; I think they succeeded, because I heard them rummaging it; I heard them talking, but so low that I could not distinguish anything they said; I had at about this time taken the buffalo robe off a little, and the men then threw a canvas-bag over my head; there were at this time side-lights and hand-lights both burning in the car; the men were when I first saw them disguised; they had black masks over their faces; they were about five feet from me; I could see that they had masks over their faces; they were about five feet from me; I could see that they had black masks over their faces; they were dressed in the ordinary dress of men; I have gone out of the district and drank so much liquor that they fell into the hands of the Police on their return.

The following table shows in detail the arrests for intoxication on Sundays and Tuesdays, for the year next preceding the 1st of November last; and to this detailed statement is added the aggregate of such arrests for the period from Jan. 1, 1867, to Nov. 1, 1867:

Month.	Year	No. of Sundays.	Average.	No. of Tuesdays	Average.	Excess of Tuesday over Sunday.
November	1867	4	198	4	307	115
December	1867	4	216	4	331	115
January	1868	4	154	4	273	119
February	1868	4	223	4	349	126
March	1868	4	222	4	404	182
April	1868	4	235	4	416	181
May	1868	4	249	4	433	184
June	1868	4	267	4	447	180
July	1868	4	268	4	448	180
August	1868	4	416	4	479	63
September	1868	4	316	4	721	405
October	1868	4	377	4	535	158
For Jan. 1 to Nov. 1, 1867		66	1,289	66	4,777	3,779
Total		66	5,289	66	11,054	5,771

The whole period covered by the table, it will be observed, includes 66 Sundays and 66 Tuesdays. The entire number of Sunday arrests for intoxication on those days was 5,289, and the whole number of Tuesday arrests for the same cause was 11,054. This gives us an average 80 arrests of persons for intoxication on each Sunday, and of 114 such arrests on each Tuesday, being a daily excess of cases of intoxication on Tuesday over those of Sunday of 39, and an aggregate excess for the period of Tuesday over Sunday intoxication of 5,771 cases.

Workingwomen's Association.

The Workingwomen's Association held a regular meeting last night, at No. 18 Cooper Institute. Miss Susan B. Anthony introduced Mrs. Ernestine L. Rose, who spoke of the great progress of industrial co-operation in England and France, saying that there were 8,000 co-operative associations of mechanics in the latter country. She advised the Workingwomen's Association to become incorporated, also to select from their number a committee to wait on popular lecturers and request them to speak occasionally for the fund of the Association. Mrs. Rose suggested that when sufficient means were raised, then a savings bank or insurance company should be established by women under the tuelage of an experienced man, whose the officers and employes should be of the gentler sex. The speaker deplored the defective education of women in comparison with men, few of them understanding any trade or pursuit sufficiently well to earn a good living at it, and urged watchmaking, jewelry, pencil making, thimble making, &c., as suitable industries for them. She advocated female suffrage, but said that suffrage would not furnish work, and that co-operation was the only salvation for workers of either sex.

Committees were appointed both to secure incorporation, and to solicit lecturers.

Miss Anthony said that a school for female telegraphing had been established in the Cooper Institute, free of charge.

Mrs. Dr. Hallock proposed sending a delegation to the Female Suffrage Convention, in Washington, 19th inst., at the expense of the Association.

Miss Anthony said that twelve bills were now before the Senate and House of Representatives proposing an amendment of the Constitution which should permit women to vote. She was now in communication with a number of wealthy ladies, wives of leading merchants and bankers of this City, who desired to aid the Association in a comprehensive and permanent way.

Miss Shelley Dawson also spoke.

The meeting was very interesting, and adjourned to Friday, 22d inst., at the same place.

The Laws of Health—A Lecture to Young Men.

A lecture was delivered last evening at No. 161 Fifth-avenue, under the auspices of the Central Organization of the Young Men's Christian Association, by Edward B. Phelps, M. D.

Though announced especially for young men, it was nevertheless devoted to the general laws of health, equally applicable to all ages and both sexes. Owing, however, to the nature of the advertisement doubtless, but one lady had the boldness to be present.

The present lecture being intended as the introductory one to a series of six, on the same subject, it was chiefly devoted to laying a foundation for those to follow. The lecturer described the elements necessary to maintain human life and health, namely—air, food, drink, light and electricity, also the component parts of the human body—consisting of fifteen in all—and illustrated the necessity of selecting those articles of food combining those elements; and, therefore, capable of communicating to the human system a perfectly active and healthful organization.

The Doctor announced, at the close of his lecture that those which were to follow would be necessarily more minute, less technical and proportionately important to the young men forming a promiscuous audience. It was announced that these lectures would be continued on Friday evening of each week.

Justice Dowling on the Police Regulations.

In consequence of the recent order from Superintendent Kennedy, in relation to the change of tour duty of the patrolmen in the Department, in which the following sentence occurred:

"The members of the station performing patrol duty from 7 to 9 o'clock A. M. will not convey prisoners arrested by them during the evening and midnight tours to Court until after being relieved at 9 o'clock A. M."

The number of prisoners arriving at the Tombs Court has been a very small one, as Justice Dowling yesterday addressed the following letter to the Police Superintendent:

Police Court, First District,
Hall of Justice,
New-York, Jan. 8, 1869.

Dear Sir: Please to take notice that under sanction of section 29 of chapter 604 of the laws of 1866, I shall continue each day to open Police Court for the arraignment of persons arrested, as I have always done, at the hour of 7 A. M. in Willson and 4 A. M. in Summer, and that I do so in order to carry out, for the benefit of persons arrested, the robust spirit and letter of section 30 of the Metropolitan Police law, in these words, "If the Magistrate be not holding a court, such persons shall be detained in a Station-house until the next public sitting of the Magistrate, and no longer, but shall be then arraigned without delay before such Magistrate, to be dealt with according to law." I perceive that you have issued an order, the necessary effect of which will be to keep, for some hours after my public sitting commences, such prisoners, many of them illegally detained. You will, of course, perceive that to persist in the order would be to subject the officers to prosecution, for false imprisonment, or that, on the score of justice to your department, if not of justice to those detained, it would be advisable to concur with me in carrying out the letter and spirit of the act I have quoted.

JOSEPH DOWLING, Police Justice.

John A. Kennedy, Superintendent Metropolitan Police.

The Police Pay Movement—Action of the Board of Commissioners.

Superintendent Kennedy yesterday issued an order (No. 556) to the Captains of Police, in which he inclosed a series of resolutions adopted by the Board of Commissioners in relation to the proposed movement for increased pay on the part of the Captains and Sergeants. The following are the resolutions referred to:

Resolved, That meetings of officers of the Metropolitan Police force at the Central Department, to devise and procure legislative action in favor of an increase of the salaries of the officers, are disapproved.

Resolved, That the subscription or contribution of money by members of the Metropolitan Police force, to be used in the attempt to influence Legislative action in favor of an increase of the salaries or compensation of officers or members of the force, is disapproved.

Resolved, That members of the Metropolitan Police force will not be permitted to be absent from the Metropolitan Police District without leave of the Board, to be specially granted in each case. Leaves of absence will not be granted to members for the purpose of attending the Legislature, with a view, or for the purpose, of influencing Legislative action.

Resolved, That the foregoing resolutions be sent by the Superintendent to the Captain of each precinct, with instructions that they be read to the members of the force under their respective commands.

The Rogers Murder—Rewards Offered for Information.

The Mayor, as may be seen by reference to an advertisement in our columns, offers a reward of $1,000, and a guarantee against prosecution, to the man who accompanied the murderer of Mr. Rogers, if he will present himself. Another reward of a like sum is offered to the person who addressed an envelope to "James Logan, City," which was found in the pocket torn from the murderer when struggling with his victim, when he presents himself and proves his identity. Other rewards are offered for certain specified information desired, and one of $2,500 for such information as will lead to the arrest of James Logan, a discharged convict, description of whom is given in the advertisement referred to, in detail. The Mayor pledges himself personally responsible for the payment of any or all of these sums.

Justice Bedford Abandons a Paying Business.

The new City Judge, Gunning S. Bedford, Jr., voluntarily abandons the right given him by precedent to act in the "landlord and tenant dispossess proceedings" which has hitherto yielded a handsome revenue. A notice to this effect was yesterday posted up in the Judge's Chambers, concluding as follows, and signed by him: "Although it is a business of a very lucrative character (yielding from $15,000 to $20,000 a year,) yet, in my opinion, it is not a proper or appropriate business for me. I shall not, therefore, entertain proceedings in that kind of practice, but am determined, as far as I am concerned, to allow it to return to its former and legitimate channel, where it once was and where it properly and unquestionably belongs, viz., to the courts of the civil and marine justices of this City."

Increase of Labor at the New-York Post Office.

The increase of work at the Post Office of this City is admirably suggested by the following figures:

	Dec. 1867.	Dec. 1868.	Increase.
Mail letters delivered	1,159,998	1,434,807	274,809
Drop letters delivered	594,766	681,482	156,716
Papers delivered	164,050	288,718	124,668
Letters collected	1,480,947	2,960,788	879,838

Correction.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your paper of Thursday morning, in reference to the murder of James Smalley, aged 16, who died Saturday morning, your reporter says that the prisoner McCourkinson was one of his associates. This is not so. When the deceased, James Smalley, went into the store he was with two friends. The prisoner McCourkinson was sitting in the store at the time they went in. James Smalley was a native of New-York. A FRIEND OF THE DECEASED.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

Greece and the Eastern Question.—The cause of Greece found an eloquent and learned advocate in J. Ferdinand de Fenzie last evening. He delivered his lecture at the Bloomingdale Lyceum. He was introduced by Rev. Dr. Ramsay. We can said that the modern Greeks are an enlightened, moral and brave people, eminently superior to their oppressors the Turks; that they are especially deserving of the sympathy and support of the American people, being kindred to them in their ideas and institutions. They have an excellent free school system, similar to our own. In Athens the late President Felton found that nearly all the maids of honor to the late Queen were graduates of Mr. Hill's American School in that city, and received a liberal and virtuous course of instruction. Mr. De Fenzie believed that the Monroe Doctrine, if worth anything, should be applied in the Levant to aid Greece, with its 14,000,000 of educated and progressive inhabitants, to throw off the tyranny of Turkey, with its 3,000,000 of barbarous and uneducated people. He concluded by saying that Greece, through her advanced civilization, must eventually break the thraldom which now enslaves her.

Ninth Assembly District Union Republican Executive Committee.—The Union Republican Executive Committee of the Ninth Assembly District met last evening, at the headquarters, Bleecker Buildings, corner of Bleecker and Morton streets, and organized by electing S. L. Maconeber, Chairman; Edward F. Brown, Vice-Chairman, and D. W. Clark, Secretary. The proceedings of organizing the Committee were conducted with the greatest harmony. The meeting was adjourned for one week, when the usual Committees will be appointed.

Funeral of Rev. Benjamin Wheeler.—Rev. Benjamin Wheeler, of the Baptist Church, died on Tuesday, at Port Richmond, S. I. He was beloved and respected by all who knew him. He had been for thirty-five years in the ministry. His funeral took place yesterday at 2 P. M. at the Port Richmond Baptist Church and was largely attended. The services were conducted by Rev. Wm. Morris, of Brooklyn; Rev. Mr. Bonnell and Rev. D. W. Bunwood. The remains were interred at Factoryville.

Workingmen's Union.—A meeting of the Union was held last evening for the purpose of electing officers, with the following result: President, W. J. Jessup; First Vice-President, Frank Hewlett; Recording Secretary, Mr. Browning; Corresponding Secretary, Mr. Jessup; Assistant Secretary, Mr. Hewlett; Financial Secretary, Mr. Young.

Fatal Accident.—Last evening Thomas Laney, a longshoreman, fell through the hatchway of the Steamer England, lying at Pier No. 47 North River, and was instantly killed. The body was removed to No. 533 Washington-street, and the Coroner notified to hold an inquest.

Fire in Seventh-street.—At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon a fire occurred in the dining saloon corner of Hall-place and Seventh-street, doing a damage of $700. The premises are insured for $11,000 in the Globe, Park, Peter Cooper and Williamsburg City Insurance companies.
